PREFACE

The leading article in the present volume is a biographical sketch of the late Jacob H. Schiff by Doctor Cyrus Adler. In the passing of Jacob H. Schiff the entire Jewish people have been bereft of a staunch champion and a worthy representative. His influence in our own country was so benign and so far-reaching that in the United States, both Jews and non-Jews, will long cherish his memory, and as "mankind is enriched by the story of great personalities, and future generations are stimulated to high deeds by the knowledge of the acts of those who have gone before," it is but natural that the leading place in this volume should be given to a sketch of the inspiring life of this great American and devoted Jew. His splendid service to the Jewish Publication Society of America, only one of the many institutions which he loved, makes it all the more fitting that his memory should be thus honored, and readers of the American Jewish Year Book are fortunate in having the fascinatingly interesting details from the pen of Doctor Cyrus Adler, who was a close personal friend of Mr. Schiff and his enthusiastic co-worker in many an enterprise, especially those dealing with the promotion of Jewish education and learning.

In the tragic death of Israel Friedlaender and in the passing of Abram S. Isaacs, the Jews of America have suffered further sorrow, and the Jewish Publication Society has lost two of its most conscientious workers. Brief notices of the lives of these two notable figures are, therefore, also given in this volume.

Discussion about the immigrant and his place in American life has become very general within recent years, and it was considered valuable to give a survey of those agencies which the Jews of the United States have established for the purpose of helping their immigrant co-religionists to adapt themselves to conditions here, to imbibe American ideals, and to make their own contribution to those ideals. The account presented to us by Doctor Charles S. Bernheimer shows that the resources created for this purpose are numerous and varied, and are intelligently and efficiently administered.

In order to reduce the greatly increased cost of paper, printing, and binding, the endeavor has been made to condense the contents of this volume wherever this could be done without reducing the usefulness of the various sections. Thus, the Record of Events has been made somewhat briefer; from the List of Periodicals, the section on Organization and Trade Journals has been omitted, and the Calendar for One Hundred Years, published in Volumes 21 and 22, has not been reprinted.

The section on Statistics of Jews has again been revised by the Bureau of Jewish Social Research which availed itself of new information wherever this was accessible.

In the preparation of the chronology for France, I had the enthusiastic assistance of Mr. Sylvain Halff, of Paris, who is already known to readers of the American Jewish Year Book. I also wish to acknowledge the valuable and painstaking aid of the late Mr. George Kessner, who met his death by drowning during the past summer. Miss Rose A. Herzog has again contributed her experience and care to the compilation of the Record of Events and to the revision of the various Directories and Lists. Thanks are extended also to Mr. I. G. Dobsevage, the Secretary of the Jewish Publication Society, who gave valuable advice and assisted in the reading of proof; to Doctor Cyrus Adler for his helpful criticisms; and to Doctor B. Halper, the Editor of the Society.

is called 682 (חרפ"ב) according to the short system (לפ"ק). It is a perfect common year of 12 months, 50 Sabbaths, 355 days, beginning on Monday, the second day of the week, and having the first day of Passover on Thursday, the seventh day of the week; therefore its sign is בשה, i. e., ב for second, ש for perfect (שלמה), and ה for fifth. It is the first year of the 300th lunar cycle of 19 years, and the twenty-sixth year of the 203rd solar cycle of 28 years, since Creation.

JACOB HENRY SCHIFF
A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH
BY CYRUS ADLER

I

Jacob H. Schiff was known in all parts of the American continent, in every country of Europe, in Japan, in Palestine, in fact throughout the civilized world. Vaguely he was considered as the combination of a great financier and a great philanthropist, but in neither capacity had the extent of his deeds been brought home to any considerable proportion of the vast numbers to whom his name was familiar.

What manner of man was this who, of no ruling family or exalted official station, so impressed himself upon the imagination of people in many climes and in all conditions of life? To answer this question is well nigh impossible in a brief sketch. And yet the attempt should be made, for mankind is enriched by the story of great personalities, and future generations are stimulated to high deeds by the knowledge of the acts of those who have gone before. The public, too, has a right to know of the lives of those whom it has followed and admired, so that it may be ennobled by the consciousness of the "merits of the fathers."

Jacob H. Schiff was born at Frankfort-on-the-Main on January 10, 1847, and died in New York on September 25, 1920. He was descended of a family known to have been settled in Frankfort since 1370. The pedigree carefully worked out in the Jewish Encyclopedia presents the longest continuous record of any Jewish family now in existence. The earliest Schiff, named Jacob Kohen Zedek, was dayyan (ecclesiastical judge) of the Frankfort community in the fourteenth century. Another, Meir Kohen Zedek Schiff, was parnas (president) of the community in 1626. Among those who followed were business men and a number of Rabbis. Of the latter several were men of distinction, notably Meir ben Jacob Schiff, called Maharam Schiff (1608-1644). He was a prolific author, composing commentaries on the entire Talmud some of which were published in 1737. Another member of the family who gained eminence in the Rabbinate was David (Tebele) Schiff who became chief rabbi of England in 1765 and died in London in 1792. He was a preacher of great power and also a man of native ability as is shown by his correspondence recently published by Doctor Charles Duschinsky in his work The Rabbinate of the Great Synagogue.

It is impossible and indeed inappropriate even to endeavor to give here an outline of the history of this distinguished family. The few facts mentioned are intended to indicate that for over six hundred years there can be traced an unbroken line of rabbis, scholars, men of affairs and communal leaders, all of whose qualities went to make up the background of the very remarkable man who is the subject of this sketch and in whose single person nearly all the traits of this long line of ancestors were blended—some appearing in greater proportion than others but all nevertheless present.

His immediate forebears were Moses Schiff and Clara Niederrhofheim. The father, a man of high sense of duty, exact and stern, was rigorously devoted to religious observances, and demanded a similar devotion on the part of his children; the mother was a woman of sweet and conciliatory nature. The distinctive traits of both of these personalities were found in the son, for Mr. Schiff set before himself a life of exacting duty, whilst toward others he showed great kindness and consideration.

His education, both secular and religious, was thorough for a layman. In the course of time by wide reading and contact with men he acquired a broad, general cultivation. He had a good knowledge of the Hebrew language, and could freely quote the Bible in the sacred tongue. He read some favorite commentaries, and kept himself abreast of the developments in biblical studies. His exactness in method and his knowledge of, and interest in, Jewish learning undoubtedly went back to the excellent if severe training of his boyhood days.

In 1865 he left Frankfort ostensibly for England, but he had already determined upon America as his future home. As the voyage across the Atlantic was in those days still a fearsome enterprise, he stopped in England long enough to write a series of letters to his mother which were left in the hands of a friend to be mailed at regular intervals, so that the mother should be spared the anxiety of his passage across the ocean until a letter would have been received from New York announcing his arrival there.

In New York he was employed for a time in the brokerage firm of Frank and Sons, and later became a partner in the firm of Budge, Schiff and Company. After the death of his father in 1873 he went to Germany intending to live with his mother, but the spirit of America had entered his soul, and his mother to whom he was deeply attached, herself suggested that he should return to the United States.

On January 1, 1875, he became a member of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Company, and before many years the older members of the firm, recognizing his financial genius, were glad to accord him the headship of the house.

II

To describe the financial career of Mr. Schiff is not the purpose of this sketch designed for the American Jewish Year Book which will naturally place a disproportionate emphasis upon his relation to Jewish institutions and to Judaism.

Still not even a brief sketch can be prepared without giving some idea of the financial operations in which his firm was engaged under his leadership. During this period it became one of the two most influential private international banking houses on the Western Hemisphere. It was characteristic of Mr. Schiff that as a banker his activities were all creative, looking to the development of the resources and the extension of the commerce of the United States. Hence, he was largely concerned in the financing of railway enterprises, recognizing that the prosperity of a great country depended, in large measure, upon the extent and efficiency of its transportation agencies.

He believed it important for America to bring the Atlantic and Pacific closer together, thus aiding in uniting the citizenship of the United States economically and politically. In 1897 he reorganized the Union Pacific Railroad which was described at the period as being "battered, bankrupt and decrepit"—an achievement of the first rank and constructive in the best sense.

Mr. Schiff had faith in his intuition of men, and being swift to recognize genius, gave his support to Edward H. Harriman. According to financial authorities the Harriman-Schiff railway combination became the most powerful, the most aggressive, and the most successful that America had ever known.

In like manner he was one of the first supporters and associates of James J. Hill, who, by the building of the Great Northern Railway, virtually became the founder of a vast empire in the Northwest. Mr. Schiff was for many years a director of the Great Northern, retiring only after a conflict of interest developed between it and the Union Pacific Railway. The operations of Kuhn, Loeb and Company as bankers for railways began with their association with the Chicago and Northwestern some fifty years back. One of their most important connections was with the Pennsylvania Railroad system which came especially to the notice of the general public under the presidency of A. J. Cassatt who dreamed the great dream of a tunnel under the Hudson and of a Railway Station in the City of New York commensurate with the importance of the great city. Kuhn, Loeb and Company succeeded in floating for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company large loans in this country and abroad. Two checks drawn to the order of the Company on February 17, 1915, for the amount of $49,098,000, and on June 1, 1915, for $62,075,000, which hang in modest frames in the offices of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, attest the magnitude of their loans.

Other railroads whose financial operations his firm aided were the Baltimore and Ohio, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Delaware and Hudson, the Illinois Central and Southern Pacific. Of many of these railroads Mr. Schiff became a director, but his participation in large financial enterprises was by no means limited to them. He also financed a number of important industrial undertakings, such as the Westinghouse Electric Company, the U. S. Rubber Company, Armour and Company, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the Western Union Telegraph Company. He served as a Director of the Western Union Telegraph Company, of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, of the National City Bank, of the Central Trust Company, American Railway Express Co., and of the Fifth Avenue Trust Company.

His advice was sought in these and many other enterprises because of his wide knowledge of affairs in America and Europe and of the sound conclusions he was able to draw from this knowledge. His confidence in the great trans-continental railways was heightened by his repeated journeys to the West and the South, so that he appreciated from personal observation the richness of our great national domain. He was alive to the fact that agriculture was the backbone of commerce, and once, when asked what the stock market indicated with regard to business possibilities of the season, said that he did not follow the stock market but rather the crop reports.

As to the correctness of his judgment, B. C. Forbes, a well-known financial writer, has declared, in speaking of him, that "Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have issued more good investments and fewer bad ones than any other banking concern in America."

The Japanese loan of 1904-5 which Mr. Schiff financed attracted world-wide attention, and had important consequences. In 1904 war broke out between Russia and Japan. Gold, Mr. Schiff said once, was not essential to the conduct of a war if the war was really a national effort—for the greater part of the cost of the war was borne by the people of the country who, if the war were popular, readily took the paper money which all governments put out to meet the greatly increased expenditures for military purposes. Gold was useful for stabilizing the paper issues and only necessary for purchases made abroad by the warring nations. He used emphatically to declare, long before it became the stock in trade of a certain kind of propagandist, that the statement that bankers could make or prevent wars was a pure myth, and that nations went to war whenever they wanted to. When Japan requested a loan in waging what seemed at the beginning a very unequal war, Mr. Schiff welcomed the opportunity to undertake the financing of so much of the loan as was to be placed in America.

The Japanese Government and people have always been appreciative of this support, and have recognized his personal influence in securing it. In 1905 the Mikado conferred upon him the Second Order of the Sacred Treasure of Japan "in recognition of the services rendered by you in connection with the raising of the loans of the Imperial Government in the American and European markets."

On February 22, 1907, he undertook a journey to Japan accompanied by his constant companion Mrs. Schiff and a party of friends. Of this journey there exists a unique literary record in the form of a beautifully printed quarto on Japan paper and charmingly illustrated, bearing the title "Our Journey to Japan, by Jacob H. Schiff. Printed as a surprise to the Author January 10, 1907." The simple explanation of this rather unusual title-page is that Mrs. Schiff printed the letters which he sent home, and presented the volume to him on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday.

The volume contains a lively and intimate description of the stops of the party at Salt Lake City, San Francisco, and Honolulu, but naturally deals principally with Japan. Here is a part of the record:

"Wednesday, March 28th is the great gala day for me personally, the private audience with the Mikado being set for half past eleven o'clock, luncheon to be served right after the audience. I am told it is the first time that the Emperor has invited a foreign private citizen to a repast at the palace, heretofore only foreign Princes having been thus honored. . . . We are first shown into a large reception room, where we are received by Mr. Nagazaki, the Master of Ceremonies, who speaks English fluently, and who informs the Minister of Finance that the Emperor will receive me alone. He leaves us and returns shortly, stating to me that he has been commanded by his Majesty to invest me with the insignias of the Order of the Rising Sun, which the Emperor has graciously condescended to bestow upon me. Accordingly he divests me of the Star of the Second Order of the Sacred Treasure, which I had received the previous year, and replaces it by the two decorations, composing the second class of the Order of the Rising Sun. Thereupon I am taken through long halls into a smaller reception room, where the Emperor receives me standing. He is dressed in military house uniform (short jacket and Koppi), also wearing the Order of the Rising Sun and a number of medals. Mr. Nagazaki is at his side as interpreter. The Emperor extends his hand and bids me welcome to Japan, saying that he has heard of the important assistance I have given the nation at a critical time, and that he is pleased to have an opportunity to thank me in person for it. I reply that I feel my services have been over-estimated, but from the start my associates and I, believing in the righteousness of the cause of Japan, when we had the opportunity practically to prove our sympathy gladly embraced it."

There follows a description of the luncheon and of other festivities, notably the report of a speech made at a dinner by Mr. Bakatani, the Finance Minister, who, characterizing Mr. and Mrs. Schiff and their party as "the most distinguished guests that we have ever had from the United States of America," recites the details of the aid Mr. Schiff had rendered to Japan. He said that when Japan was undertaking, in London in the spring of 1904, to negotiate a loan of ten million pounds and was finding difficulty in securing the amount "Mr. Schiff in a single conversation with Mr. Takahashi offered to underwrite single-handed a half of what we wanted." He concluded with the statement: "The amount of our loan subscribed by Mr. Schiff from the first to the fifth issue arrives at a grand total of £39,250,000." After the Russo-Japanese War was ended the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. placed a large issue of City of Tokio Bonds, the only Far Eastern municipal loan ever taken in the United States. So recently as in June, 1921, the Japanese consul attended the opening of a Parkway in New York named in his memory "Schiff Parkway," while the Japanese Commissioner on his way from London to Tokio laid a wreath upon his grave.

Besides the Japanese loan, he financed loans for other foreign governments such as Sweden, Argentine, Cuba, Mexico, and China. Prior to the World War his firm had important transactions with the Central Powers. In 1900 in conjunction with The National City Bank they issued 80,000,000 marks of German Treasury Notes and in 1912 in association with The National City Bank and Kidder, Peabody & Co., $25,000,000 of Austrian Treasury Notes.

Mr. Schiff on numerous occasions refused to participate in Russian loans and used his great influence to prevent the entry of Russia into the money markets of America, solely because of the ill-treatment of the Jews by the Russian Government. On various occasions, when Russia was pressed for funds, offers were made to him by agents of the Russian Government to relax the restrictions upon the Jews in a particular province in exchange for a loan of fifty million dollars. Mr. Schiff invariably rejected such advances, declining to buy better treatment for a section of his coreligionists.

While not chronologically in place, there may yet be a certain orderliness in discussing here Mr. Schiff's attitude to the World War. Its outbreak filled his heart with anguish. He was the only member of his family who had migrated to America. Two of his brothers and his sister had remained at the ancestral home, while his other brother was established in London. During the war his near relatives were fighting in the armies of three countries in Europe, on opposing sides. Mr. Schiff was an American of the intensity which we sometimes witness in men who have migrated here. The natural born citizen frequently takes his citizenship as a matter of course. For the naturalized citizen it often becomes almost a sacrament. Lack of complete harmony with American ideals and aspirations was unthinkable to Mr. Schiff. Yet Germany was the land of his birth. He had many ties of affection and friendship there, and he beheld the conflict with horror. He hoped for a speedy peace and to that end urged a peace without victory, and, affrighted at the danger to civilization by the civil war of the white races in Europe, desired America to act as a neutral mediator.

From the very beginning of the war he realized the disaster to the world in a German victory. He recognized the iniquity of the German Government, and stood firmly with the American attitude toward submarine warfare. None was more bitter than he in denunciation of German outrages but, like Mr. Wilson, he felt that there was a difference between the German Government and the German people.

Mr. Schiff maintained relations with individuals in Germany until the entrance of the United States in the war in April, 1917, but during the entire period of the World War, beginning with 1914, Kuhn, Loeb and Company did no financing directly or indirectly for the German Government or its allies. On the other hand, they placed large loans for the French cities of Paris, Bordeaux, Lyons and Marseilles, which were issued primarily for humanitarian purposes. He was also willing that the firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Company participate in the Anglo-French loan of 1915 if none of the money were made available to Russia. This statement was issued by him on October 1, 1915, in regard to the loan:

“With differing sympathies on the part of individual members of our firm, we decided at the outbreak of the war to refrain from financing public loans for any of the governments of the belligerent nations.

“Concerning the present Anglo-French Dollar Loan, we have felt that as American bankers we should assist in what we believe will result in promoting the interest of the country's commerce and industries, but it not having been found practicable to give any actual assurances that the Government of Russia—against whose inhumanity the members of our firm have ever raised their voices—is not to derive benefit from the funds that are to be raised through the Anglo-French Loan, I have felt constrained to advise my firm to refrain from becoming participants in the Loan.”

When the Czar's Government fell in 1917, Kuhn, Loeb and Company at once advised the allies' bankers that there was no longer any impediment to their participating in the allied financing. He was in sympathy with the Kerensky Government, and evinced this by a subscription of one million rubles to the loan issued by that Government which, for the time being, at least, is valueless. He sent congratulations to Professor Miliukoff, and received from him a cordial reply. He hoped for great things from this Government which he thought would establish a constitutional régime in Russia. It is needless to say that he was bitterly opposed to the Soviet Government and to all of its doctrines.

He participated largely in the Liberty Loans and in all efforts on their behalf, advised our Government in financial matters, and by word and act invited many another to patriotic effort—in fact did all that an American who had reached his seventieth year could do.

During his long life in America he took his duties as a citizen with great seriousness. In national politics he was a Republican, and supported that party. In 1913, however, he gave his vote to Mr. Wilson, aided his campaign, and supported him for his second term. Although personally very fond of Mr. Roosevelt and his supporter in state and national politics, when he represented the Republican party, Mr. Schiff did not approve of the Progressive schism, and never supported that party in either national or state politics. It was his intention, had he lived, to vote for Mr. Harding in 1920.

In the City of New York he was a strong adherent of movements to get municipal affairs out of the hands of machine politicians, and took a prominent and active part in all public efforts to that end. He was a member of the Committee of Seventy in 1898, of the Committee of Fifteen in 1902 and of the Committee of Nine in 1905.

III

To many it was as the philanthropist—the man who not only loved his fellow-men but translated his creed into action that Mr. Schiff was most widely known. His method of giving unasked might be illustrated by many examples. One will suffice. In 1886 the Reverend Doctor Sabato Morais of Philadelphia decided to establish a Jewish Theological Seminary in New York. In the new institution a library was required and the securing of what then seemed a large sum (though it would now be insignificant) for the purpose was undertaken. Mr. Schiff had not been asked to participate. One day he wrote that he had heard of the enterprise, that if the entire sum had not been collected, he would like to contribute, and that at all events he always regarded it as a privilege to aid in the advancement of Hebrew learning and wished to be given the opportunity to take part whenever such projects were proposed.

From 1886 to 1901 Mr. Schiff contributed to the support of the Seminary as he did many other institutions. In the latter year, however, he realized that both for the conservation of Judaism as well as for the promotion of Hebrew learning in America it was necessary to place the Seminary upon a better financial and scholastic basis. Taking the lead as usual, with a few others, he established an endowment fund of $500,000 to which he was the largest individual contributor. He purchased a piece of ground and erected a substantial fire-proof building, entirely at his own expense, and bought two valuable collections—those of Steinschneider and Kautzsch—for the library. On the occasion of his seventieth birthday he gave $100,000 to the Seminary on the condition that the income should be used to increase the salaries of the faculty, and he bequeathed $100,000 to it in his will. Added to these large gifts, he made annual contributions to its various funds. He attended every meeting of its Board of Directors and Executive Committee, except when he was out of the country, was present at practically all the student dinners, dedicated their House, and attended and spoke at the Commencements, and in general showed the liveliest interest in the welfare of the Institution.

With Doctor Solomon Schechter he formed a firm friendship. These two strong natures, at the outset of their relationship, occasionally clashed, but they were both big men, and their differences ended in a laugh, Mr. Schiff saying: "We are both Cohanim (priests), and the priests traditionally have high tempers." With Professor Friedlaender, too, Mr. Schiff had formed friendly relations. The former's tragic death was a severe blow to him. When the news came in July, 1920, Mr. Schiff was already seriously ill. But all his thoughts were of the great loss the Seminary and Jewish scholarship had suffered and of grief and pity for the bereft widow and children. It required almost physical force to prevent him from going to the meeting held in memory of Professor Friedlaender on September 9, though Mr. Schiff's own final summons came but two weeks later.

In 1911 he created, in connection with the Seminary and the Hebrew Union College at Cincinnati, a fund for the support of two Teachers Institutes, one of them east and the other west of the Allegheny mountains. He so strongly recognized the need of proper teachers for Jewish religious schools that he came to regard these teachers institutes of equal if not superior importance to the rabbinical seminaries, though he considered both essential and close co-operation between them of primary importance.

This opinion resulted in an incident very characteristic both of Mr. Schiff's temperament and of his bigness of character. In 1904 Dr. Schechter inaugurated the course for teachers at the Seminary Building on West 123rd Street. The classes were held in the evenings, and seemed to languish. After an experiment of three or four years Dr. Schechter became convinced that the Seminary was situated too far from the neighborhood in which nearly all of the students lived, to make night courses successful. Accordingly the question was broached of their being held elsewhere. Mr. Adolphus S. Solomons, the senior member of the Board of Directors, introduced a resolution providing for the removal of the Teachers Institute to a locality further down-town, which would be more accessible to the students. Mr. Schiff opposed the resolution. He considered it bad administration, tending to weaken both establishments, and rendering proper supervision of the Institute by the head of the Seminary impossible. His arguments were vigorously combated. Mr. Schiff had, as has been said, the priestly high temper, and replied with the statement that he regarded this resolution as so dangerous that if it were adopted, much as he loved the Seminary and close as it was to his heart, he would feel constrained to resign from the Board. The resolution to remove the Institute from the Seminary building was adopted by an overwhelming majority. Mr. Schiff left the meeting room deeply chagrined.

His associates felt that he would not continue on the Board of Directors. He appeared, however, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee held a fortnight thereafter, and without in any way referring to the previous occurrence, at the close of the meeting arose, stated his conviction of the great need for the training of Jewish religious teachers, and announced his intention to create a special Trust Fund to this end to which he at once contributed $100,000.

This story is characteristic of traits of Mr. Schiff, which were noticeable especially in his earlier years; a quickness of temper, a momentary insistence upon his own judgment, and a willingness to recognize upon reflection that he had been hasty, to accept the views of his fellow-fiduciaries and to make ample amends. Within a very few years, at about his sixtieth year, he mellowed greatly. The flashes of temper disappeared, and he in turn exhorted others not to be hasty and at all times to be patient.

But the Seminary was not the only Jewish institution of learning to which Mr. Schiff gave his interest and support, and since he aided institutions which represent different shades of Jewish religious belief and practice, it may be fitting at this place to endeavor to give some idea of his point of view with regard to Judaism. He had been reared in the rigid school of Frankfort Orthodoxy, of which Sampson Raphael Hirsch was the leader. Upon his arrival in America, he became a member of the Reform Synagogue, and so remained during all his life. He was attracted to this form of Judaism by a number of circumstances, but the one he mentioned most frequently was that it satisfied the religious cravings of those who could no longer adhere to the ancient rabbinical religion, and thus averted conversion to Christianity. He frequently asserted that had Reform Judaism regularly existed in Germany at the time of Moses Mendelssohn, his family and others like them would not have been lost to Judaism. There were, however, curious lapses in Mr. Schiff's adherence to the Reform Synagogue, and he frequently said that no Jew could be a good Reform Jew unless he had once been an Orthodox Jew. In the discussions connected with the reorganization of the Seminary he expressed his notion of its policy as an adherence to "reasonable" orthodoxy, a phrase which offended some but which nevertheless was not devoid of theological value. He strictly abstained from all secular occupation on the Sabbaths and festivals, and always visited the synagogue on Saturday mornings. On Friday evening, before dinner, he read the services to his family, and that evening was his family evening. The Seder services at Passover were always a great occasion, never to be forgotten no matter what the circumstances. In his letters from Japan he gives this interesting note:

"Monday, April 9th. We return to the hotel and because of the weather stay indoors, preparing for the holiday which begins this evening. Thoughtful friend Neustadt has brought 'Matzoth' from San Francisco—we should hardly have been able to procure any in Tokio, as there appear to be no co-religionists here—and as the evening arrives we give the 'Seder' in our apartments, probably the first time this has been done in the capital of the Mikado. Mother has prepared the festive table just like at home—nothing is missing for the ceremonies—and with the entire party around the table, we read the 'Hagada.' Ernest [his nephew Ernest Schiff of London] reading the youngest child's part ('Ma Nish-tano'). Thus in a homelike way we celebrate the old festival in distant lands." As late as April, 1920, showing that this event never lost its importance for him, he wrote: "We had eighteen at Seder which passed off quite pleasantly and I hope so did your own celebration."

The Hanukkah lights were lit not only in his own house, but he went to the houses of his children and was present at the lighting of them for his children and grandchildren, one of his dearest wishes being the transmission of these traditions to his descendants.

The Day of Atonement was a real day of fasting and prayer to him, and on the very last one of his life, Wednesday, September 22 (he died on the 25th) he fasted the entire day, read the services through with his family (not feeling able to go to the synagogue), and experienced the greatest satisfaction at having been able to get through the day.

But it did not require that a Sabbath or New Moon or Holy Day should remind him of God and his religion. He was essentially a devout person. Every morning he read his prayers at the stated time. After meals he said grace. He did not eat forbidden food. He stood outside the gate of the cemetery at Dr. Schechter's funeral because of the laws of the priesthood. During his illness he wrote once: "I shall try now to get my sleep, nerve and energy back; with care and with God's help I hope to succeed, but in any event I have so long a stretch of good health and happiness to my credit that I should have naught but gratitude to the Almighty."

This digression makes it unnecessary further to explain Mr. Schiff's interest in Jewish religious education of all kinds, even if the institution were not in exact accord with his own views. Frequently he quoted the sentence: "Would that all the Lord's people were prophets."

He was a generous supporter of the Hebrew Union College, making gifts to its Endowment Fund, its Building Fund, and in other ways indicating his interest in its progress. He attended the dedication of its new buildings, maintained an affectionate relationship with its venerable president, Dr. Kohler, and made a large gift to the Pension Fund of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Shortly before his death the College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Hebrew Letters.

The Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary, better known as the Yeshibah of New York, also claimed his aid. In 1905 he hoped to bring about a useful modification in the policy of the Yeshibah, and at the same time co-ordinate its work with that of the Seminary. A conference was called by him to this end, and an agreement was entered into conditioned upon which he granted his assistance. Much to his regret, this understanding was not carried out.

Secondary education he recognized not only as intrinsically important but essential for the institutions of higher learning which he so greatly prized. And so it was that he interested himself in the Bureau of Education of the New York Kehillah, to which he became a generous contributor and whose activities he followed with unflagging concern. He likewise was a liberal patron of the Up-Town Talmud Torah, and of many similar establishments.

He had a good knowledge of Jewish literature and a deep interest in its diffusion. Prior to the establishment of the Jewish Publication Society of America he would occasionally aid an author to publish a work by guaranteeing its cost to the publishing firm. He had a plan in mind to set aside a sum of money to create a Fund for this purpose, when the project for a Publication Society began to take shape. He was abroad in 1888 when the meeting which organized the Society was held. He cabled his greetings and five thousand dollars. Although never in any way associated with the management of this Society, he remained its steadfast friend, and through his interest and generosity enabled it to make the preparations for several important contributions to Jewish literature.

He was a constant reader of the Bible, and strongly favored the idea of a new English translation by Jewish scholars. In 1908 he presented the sum of $50,000 to the Society to enable it to carry out this undertaking, and its successful completion was a source of great happiness to him. The first copy on India paper, elegantly bound, was presented to him with a suitable inscription.

That he was permitted to have the merit of having done this pleased him greatly, and he used to read from this copy to his grandchildren, though for his own study he went back to a familiar Hebrew edition with a German translation and commentaries.

A dinner was given to celebrate the completion of the manuscript of this translation, and at it he announced his intention to make further provision for the publication of Jewish literature, both in the original and translation. For this purpose he gave another Fund of $50,000 for the publication, in text and translation, of a selection of the Jewish Classics. This work was delayed by the World War, but it may be expected that not many years will elapse before this Series—a further monument to his interest in Jewish learning and literature—will begin to appear. Not content with these gifts, he also gave to the Publication Society one-half of the sum necessary to create a press for the printing of Hebrew works which is now approaching completion.

The Jewish Encyclopedia, a monumental work which, in spite of shortcomings, has been of great service in the spread of Jewish knowledge, was undertaken by the publishers as a purely business enterprise without a clear appreciation of the great cost and labor involved. After the first volume appeared the discontinuance of the work was threatened. Mr. Schiff had not favored the undertaking, believing that the time was not ripe nor the plans well matured. At the invitation of Isidor Straus, however, he attended a small conference, and, fearing that the honor of American Jewry would suffer if this widely-advertised work should remain a torso, he became one of a number to aid in rendering its completion possible.

He realized that the library of the Seminary in New York was designed for scholars and, situated as it was on the Heights beyond Columbia University, was far from the center of Jewish population. He knew, too, that the search after Jewish lore was unquenchable in the Jewish soul and that many a merchant or mechanic or news-boy might, by reason of the Jewish tragedy which forced the great migration from Russia to America, be a student or even a scholar. To render books accessible to these and to professional men living in the center of the city he made possible the establishment of the very excellent Jewish Department of the New York Public Library, which is probably the most largely used Jewish collection in the world.

In 1911 Mr. Herbert Putnam, the librarian of Congress, approached Mr. Schiff with a view to securing a considerable Jewish library which was then offered for sale. After consultation and consideration he agreed to make this gift to the National Library with the understanding that a competent Semitic scholar would be placed in charge of the collection and that funds would be provided for its growth and upkeep. By this arrangement an important nucleus for a Jewish library was established at Washington which bids fair to develop steadily and provide opportunity for the ever-increasing number of students who resort to the National Capitol. Under the generous system of inter-library loans this collection is also made available to students all over the country.

Much earlier than some of these enterprises in behalf of Jewish and Semitic learning was Mr. Schiff's interest in that department of study at Harvard University. Through family connections he became attracted to that ancient American seat of learning. Both of his brothers-in-law were Harvard men—Morris Loeb, a distinguished chemist, who unhappily died in his early prime, and James Loeb well known for his collections of Greek antiquities, the publications describing them, and particularly for the Loeb Classical Library that remarkable production, originally designed to cover in text and translation the entire Greek and Latin literature from Homer till the fall of Constantinople in 1453, of which some two hundred volumes have already appeared. Mr. Schiff was also strongly drawn by the great personality of President Charles Eliot, with whom he formed a lasting friendship. When he was invited in 1889 to act as a member of the advisory committee on the Semitic department of Harvard University he readily acquiesced. Among his most notable acts was the establishment of the Semitic Museum at Harvard. A number of gentlemen had made gifts for this purpose, but at Mr. Schiff's request they were withdrawn in order that he might have the pleasure of erecting the building and providing for the collection himself. It was also due to his generosity that Harvard was enabled to send an expedition to Samaria, which uncovered that interesting site, and secured inscriptions which have proved important for a knowledge of the early life of Israel and for Semitic epigraphy. Incidentally these activities brought him into close and affectionate relations with Professor David G. Lyon, the well-known Assyriologist who is curator of the Museum.

But his interest in higher education was by no means confined to Semitic learning. He was one of the early friends of Barnard College, an institution for the education of women connected with Columbia University. With Seth Low, its president and sometime mayor of New York, he had intimate relations, both political and personal. For a number of years he was treasurer of Barnard College and to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his arrival in America he made a gift of a large sum to that institution for the erection of a recreation hall for the students. It is significant that in this act he not only aided the cause of higher education but marked his recognition of the opportunities which America had afforded him by a gift which would be useful to students of all creeds and which was a token that all America and not a mere section of it was embraced within his noble heart.

In 1898 he founded the Schiff Fellowship in Political Economy in Columbia University.

In 1912 he made a gift of $100,000 to Cornell University to aid in the promotion of Germanic studies, and during the World War he withdrew the implied limitation upon the purpose to which the fund was to be devoted so that it might be applied to the furtherance of the study of any modern language or literature. He was a contributor to the funds of Johns Hopkins University and of other institutions of learning. He also aided in the establishment of the University of Frankfort his native town.

IV

Charity in its large sense—the doing of deeds of goodness and mercy—Mr. Schiff was devoted to both as a Jew and a humanitarian. It was his rigid rule to give at least his tithe to the poor. He was, however, a strong believer in organized charity, either as expressed through institutions or carried on by an individual based upon inquiry and investigation—and through all his acts of loving kindness ran the feeling that as God had blessed him with plenty, it was but right and just that he should share it with those less fortunate.

Of the numerous charities in which he was interested, to none did he give the attention which he lavished on the Montefiore Home and Hospital. This institution, established on the one hundredth birthday of that great Jew, Sir Moses Montefiore, was created at the suggestion of Adolphus S. Solomons in 1884. Mr. Schiff was elected president in 1885, and held that office for thirty-five years. He saw it grow from a small home for chronic invalids to one of the greatest hospitals in the country, supporting over eight hundred beds, with a great medical staff, laboratories for research, and a modern plant, complete in all of its appointments. Much of this extraordinary achievement was due to his own efforts or to his personal gifts. He was familiar with every detail of the management of this model hospital and knew personally all but the transient patients. Besides attending numerous board and committee meetings he visited this hospital every Sunday morning, spending the entire morning and allowing no other call or engagement to take him away from this duty. He rarely wrote a letter about the Montefiore Home or made a reference to it without speaking of it as his “labor of love.” In July, 1920, one Sunday morning, when already ill, he came in from the country to make his customary and last inspection and to chat with the older patients. The splendid pavilion which he provided was just approaching completion and he was happy to think that he had been able to create this additional instrument for the alleviation of human suffering. It was always a cause of satisfaction and pride on his part that this institution was conducted strictly according to the Jewish law, and that it contained a dignified and charming synagogue.

The Henry Street Settlement was another work of mercy and justice which had a strong hold on his heart and mind. This institution, under the inspiring leadership of Miss Lillian Wald, not only performed the function of a settlement in a congested neighborhood but also established and spread the idea of district visiting nurses. In illness the nurse has always been, even in the days before training was known, an agency as potent in the care of the sick as the physician. All know what the modern trained nurse has meant to the hospital and to the home. But what of the ailing poor? To bring this indispensable relief to the home of the needy was the admirable conception of Miss Wald, and for its realization she found Mr. Schiff, with others of his family and many friends, devoted champions. It was not simply the work but the atmosphere of the place from which it was conducted that exalted his spirit so that he not infrequently made pilgrimages to Henry Street, and ate his evening meal in that abode of high thinking and good cheer. But his interest in the visiting nurse was not confined to one institution. He gave a fund for rural district nursing, so badly needed, being carried on under the auspices of the American Red Cross of whose New York County Chapter he was for many years treasurer.

At the time of the Kishineff massacre, without organization of any kind and with the help of but a few friends, he brought together throughout the United States a vast sum for the victims of that atrocity.

When the World War broke out in 1914, the first call for help from the Jewish population of the affected zone was a request for $50,000 received from Mr. Morgenthau, then Ambassador at Constantinople, for the Jews of Palestine. To meet this request the American Jewish Committee voted $25,000, and Mr. Schiff personally offered to give $12,500 (the first of many larger gifts), if the provisional Zionist Committee would give a like amount. The condition was met, and there was thus begun the great work of the Jewish War Relief Committees, which, through the centralized agency of the Joint Distribution Committee, under the devoted leadership of Mr. Schiff's son-in-law, Felix M. Warburg, has distributed nearly forty million dollars.

Into the work of these collecting and distributing agencies Mr. Schiff, though then nearly seventy years of age, entered with great ardor. He attended meetings, large and small, organized dinners, headed drives, wrote and telegraphed, gave largely himself, in fact did everything in his power to alleviate the dreadful sufferings which the war brought in greater measure upon the Jews of Eastern Europe than upon any other section of stricken humanity, with the possible exception of the Armenians.

And these labors were being carried on alongside of equally strenuous work for the Red Cross and the various war work agencies, to all of which Mr. Schiff devoted himself with enthusiasm. He took a particular interest in the Jewish Welfare Board, constituted of various national Jewish organizations, to contribute their share to the welfare of the American soldiers and sailors and particularly to provide for the religious needs of those of the Jewish faith, an organization, to the work of which his son, Mortimer L. Schiff, greatly contributed. Yet he was not unmindful of the good work of other creeds. He made large contributions to the war work of the Young Mens' Christian Association, the Knights of Columbus, and the Salvation Army. American patriot that he was, it was the men in uniform whom he was eager to serve irrespective of their creed.

V

But Mr. Schiff was not content to limit his labors on behalf of his coreligionists to the promotion of a religious life and the alleviation of their sufferings. He had imbibed the atmosphere of American liberty and equality. He knew that in the North American Colonies Jews had been granted British citizenship long before it was accorded them in the mother country. He remembered the words of Washington spoken to the Jewish congregation of Newport: "It is no longer toleration that is spoken of," and whenever he saw the oppression of his people, his righteous indignation impelled him to some sort of action—for to think of something meant with him that action should follow.

Mr. Schiff had for years been acquainted with the misery of his brethren in the Russia of the Czars. Like most Jews of the Western world he had in his earlier days known little about the Jews in Russia. In spite of the supposed solidarity of the Jewish people, there was but little contact between the Jews of the West and the East and even less knowledge the one of the other. Graetz, the great historian of the Jews, whose monumental work was finished in 1886, practically ignored the Jews of Russia.

The increase in the hostility of czaristic Russia to its Jewish subjects, which began in 1881 evidenced by innumerable restrictive laws and regulations, added to in 1890, and followed by that horror the "pogrom," government-instituted massacres and looting of the Jews, gradually brought about a forced migration of hundreds of thousands of Jews from Russia to America. By reports and more still by actual contact with the refugees the facts became known to Jews in America, and Mr. Schiff was stirred to the depths of his being by the misery and suffering that his coreligionists—veritable martyrs to the faith—were enduring. For, be it understood, that, in spite of all statements that economic and racial questions were at the bottom of these persecutions, the waters of baptism into the Greek-Orthodox Church could always wash away economic or racial disabilities. Nor was it only the Jews who were suffering in those days. The Catholics of Poland and the Protestants (few in number though they were), in fact all dissenters from the Greek-Orthodox Church were under the harrow. There was thus presented a thoroughly cruel, illiberal, mediæval régime from which modern man had no hope.

If one wishes to have confirmation of the truth of the beliefs held by Mr. Schiff and others as to the policy of the Czar's Government towards the Jews, it can be found in the published Memoirs of Count Witte who held the important offices of Minister of Finance and Prime Minister to the Czar.

Mr. Schiff felt that the big questions connected with the condition of the Jews in Russia and Roumania and their immigration into the United States required drastic action. Sometimes he took it after consultation with others and sometimes without. Occasionally his indignation and burning zeal outran his discretion. On one occasion he seriously proposed to President Roosevelt that the United States should intervene in Russia as it had in Cuba! Again he asked Mr. Roosevelt to send a representative to the conference at Algeciras, called in 1906 to consider a settlement of affairs in Morocco, with instructions to labor for the securing of the rights of citizenship for the large number of Jews in that country. President Roosevelt did appoint Mr. Henry White, and thus took part in an International European conference in which no American interest was involved.

Mr. Schiff soon came to feel, however, that no individual should act on his own responsibility in such momentous affairs. There had been formed between New York and Philadelphia a small social group known as the Wanderers—a Saturday night supper club. This company was a variegated one. It included several lawyers, bankers, literary men, scientific men, Jewish scholars, journalists, a painter and an architect. These men smoked and talked, as such a group naturally would, about every subject under the sun; but largely under the influence of Jewish conditions in Russia and particularly of the brutal outrage at Kishineff, they came to the conclusion that an organization should be brought together calculated to help secure human rights for the Jews in Russia and in other lands where they were denied.

Moreover there was one grievance which the Jews of America had on their own account—one which they felt to be the single blot upon their American citizenship. In the days before the World War the passport was for American citizens traveling abroad an amiable formality, and the visa—the bugbear of these latter years was practically unknown, except in the case of two countries—neither of which had reached the standards of Western civilization—Russia and Turkey. In theory the passport is a letter of credence given to a national of a country proceeding abroad and invoking courtesy on the part of the country or countries which he proposes to visit. There is no obligation in international law except as required by treaty provision for one country to receive a national of any other country. The old rule that everyone not a Greek was a barbarian still held in theory. But in practice and as the result of travel and commerce this idea had been modified, and in many cases treaties had actually been made granting the nationals of the contracting parties mutual right of travel in the respective countries. Between Russia and the United States such a treaty had been entered into in 1832.

But Russia held that this treaty did not apply to American citizens of the Jewish faith and the Russian consuls in the United States interrogated every person applying for a visa as to his religion. If the religion was given as Jewish the visa was withheld. Incidentally it should be said that the same discourtesy was extended to Roman Catholic priests and Protestant missionaries.

It was to discuss and solve questions like these that Mr. Schiff joined with others in the formation, in 1906, of an organization known as the American Jewish Committee, to which he devoted much time and attention and in whose work he was always active.

As many misstatements have been made about the passport question and the abrogation of the treaty of 1832 with Russia, and propagandists have put a sinister interpretation upon it, it may be said without qualification that the attempt to secure a proper observance of the treaty of 1832 on the basis of equal rights of all American citizens under it, had been recognized as the duty of every American President and Secretary of State for forty years. Every diplomatic expedient had been tried, and the Czar's Government had always answered by delays or evasions or the "appointment of a commission to examine into the whole Jewish question."

In a letter to Count Witte, when the latter was leaving America after the Portsmouth conference, in 1905, President Roosevelt urged that the Czar's Government straighten out the passport question and remove the only possible cause of irritation between the United States and Russia. Count Witte says that he gave this letter to the Czar in person, but for five years no action was taken.

At the close of President Roosevelt's administration, the American Jewish Committee brought the subject to the attention of President Taft, who endeavored to solve it by diplomatic measures with the same lack of success as had fallen to the lot of his predecessors.

Thereupon the proposal was made that since Russia was, in fact, and had been for many years, actually violating the treaty by maintaining that under its terms she had the right to discriminate between the nationals of the United States, and in pursuance of that right to conduct an inquisition into their religious beliefs on American soil, steps should be taken to abrogate this treaty. This proposal was laid before President Taft at a conference at which Senator Knox (then Secretary of State) and W. W. Rockhill (then Ambassador to St. Petersburg), Mr. Schiff, and several others were present. Mr. Schiff was treated with great honor on that occasion, which really reflected the respect in which he was held. The President, with the insistence of the Secretary of State, gave Mr.

Schiff the precedence at his right, and for two hours the subject was discussed. Some time later President Taft gave a luncheon for a number of Jewish gentlemen, and told them in effect that our Government could do nothing. As the party left the White House, one of the company said: "Alas, we are in exile," but Mr. Schiff said "this means a fight." An appeal was made to the American people and later to Congress and finally notice of the abrogation of the treaty was given by President Taft after a resolution to that effect had passed the House of Representatives with one dissenting vote and Members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations had informed the President that it would pass the Senate unanimously.

Mr. Schiff attended the hearing on this subject before the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives at a full session. The classic presentation of the subject by Judge Mayer Sulzberger and the masterly legal argument of Mr. Louis Marshall, lasting for three hours, in which he met all questions and all comers with answers based on international and constitutional law, treaties, and precedents, greatly impressed Mr. Schiff, and when he was called upon to speak he said that he had nothing to add to their presentation, but that he had a request to make. "I know," he said, "you gentlemen are going to pass this resolution. All I ask is that you make it unanimous." And they did. This was the shortest and most effective speech a man could make.

His profound gratification at the course of events he expressed a few days later in a letter in which he wrote: "The action of the House has been most gratifying and I agree with you that we may now expect equal action on the part of the Senate. It is all like a dream and I little thought when I said to the President last February after he had turned us down, 'this question will not down, Mr. President, we had hoped that you would see that justice be done us, but you have decided otherwise; we shall now go to the American people' that the latter would be so readily aroused, and that action on their part would be so prompt and so effectual. Louis Marshall has outdone himself all through and to him more than to anybody else is due what we have accomplished."

This incident is narrated rather fully to show what part Mr. Schiff had in it and the motive which actuated him and his colleagues. It was in no sense an international action, and was dictated by the determination to clear away the last vestige of governmental discrimination against the Jews in America on the part of a foreign government and to secure recognition of the inviolability of the American passport in the hands of all of its citizens without distinction of creed. The benefits of this action would have accrued equally to Catholic priests and Protestant missionaries. It was in effect the greatest act of justice to the Jews ever undertaken by a great State and heartened the Jews of Russia in their misery.

Palestine—the Holy Land—has always loomed large in the hearts and minds of the Jewish people. The poets sang of Zion and the people daily prayed for their restoration to the land of their fathers. Mr. Schiff had joined that wing of the Synagogue in which the prayer for the restoration had been eliminated, and the mission of Israel was held to be the bringing of the knowledge of the one true God to all the peoples of all the lands in which Israel was dispersed. But there were several strains of Judaism woven into the texture of his soul, and none chanted more fervently than he: "For out of Zion shall go forth the Torah and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

When the modern Zionist movement was organized by Theodor Herzl in 1897, Mr. Schiff, like many Jews, Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform, kept aloof from it. The absence of any distinctly religious pronouncement in the Basle platform, the presence and the leadership of a number of non-religious Jews, and the secular nationalist implications of the movement offended him, and he vigorously expressed the opinion in public and in private that his sympathies were with Jews by faith and not Jews by race.

Open-mindedness, however, was one of his most distinguishing traits, and he was attracted by the nobility and loftiness of the character of Theodor Herzl. The news of the death of that great man appeared in the press on a Sabbath morning. Mr. Schiff was very much saddened by the tidings. For many minutes he was silent, and then after expressing his grief, he related that the year previous he had made an appointment in Europe to meet Herzl, that the latter's health prevented the meeting, but that instead he had held a conference with one of Herzl's most trusted lieutenants, that Herzl's plans had been explained to him, and that to his regret he had been forced to the conclusion that they could not be carried out.

Meanwhile he was showing his interest in Palestine by aiding two projects—the Jewish Agricultural Experiment Station, planned by the late Aaron Aaronsohn, the discoverer of wild wheat, and the Hebrew Technical Institute at Haifa, originally begun by the Wissotzky family of Russia. To the latter institution he made large gifts, although he declined membership on the governing boards of both. These institutions proved a great disappointment to him.

This interest in Palestine did not, however, modify his attitude toward political Zionism. When his friend Dr. Schechter joined the Zionist movement, in 1906, he engaged in a public discussion with him in the New York Times in which he expressed the opinion that Zionism was incompatible with American citizenship. A decade later he wrote: "It is quite evident that there is a serious break coming between those who wish to force the formation of a distinct Hebraic element in the United States, as distinct from those of us who desire to be American in attachment, thought and action and Jews because of our religion as well as cultural attainments of our people.

"I am quite convinced of it that the American people will not willingly permit the formation of a large separate Hebraic group with national aspirations, and that if not we, our posterity are to become sufferers in consequence."

With reference to the proposal that the Jews should seek representation as a nation in the Council of the League of Nations he wrote on August 29, 1920: "In view of what has been proposed by the Committee of Jewish Delegations in Paris, we can only pray, that God grant us protection against our friends and leave us to get on with our enemies as best we can."

As the war progressed and General Allenby captured Jerusalem, when the Russian Revolution indicated a break-up of the then great centers of Russian-Jewish learning, and the horrors of the Ukraine were super-added, Mr. Schiff began to despair for the future of Jewry in Eastern Europe. He adopted a more favorable view to the settlement of Jews in Palestine, which he looked upon as a future center of Judaism and of Jewish culture. He made considerable contributions to various funds for the development of Palestine, and even offered to join the Zionist organization provided that upon the occasion of his being accepted as a member a statement which he had prepared would be published by the organization. The offer was declined, and Mr. Schiff lived and died outside of the Zionist camp.

The war period witnessed a great upheaval in Jewish life in America. One of its manifestations was the growth, under Zionist leadership, of a nationalist movement with the endeavor to capture or, failing this, to overthrow existing Jewish organizations which did not accept the new dogma. Mr. Schiff was one of those who initially strongly opposed these views. This fact and various remarks of his at meetings in 1916 made him the target for violent attacks in the Yiddish press and platform. He was greatly wounded by these attacks, and made a statement which has a dignity and pathos that reminds one of the words of Samuel after Saul was crowned:

"I have lived for fifty-one years in New York. I am now almost at threescore and ten, and I believe ever since I have grown into manhood, there has not a day passed that I have not been seeking the good of my people.

"Whosoever can assert that for the time he knows me, or who knows of me, I have ever denied myself to my people, have denied myself to their wants, have denied myself to any cause, that I have waited until Jewish problems have been brought to me instead of going after them in my desire to cooperate, that I have not given, not only of my means but day in and day out—and I may say night in and night out—have not given of myself, let him rise and accuse me."

His last days were saddened by the appearance of an anti-Jewish agitation in the United States, the one country in which this mediæval monstrosity had never found a lodgement. He strongly urged the American Jewish Committee not to notice these scandalous attacks, and it was out of deference to his deeply expressed feeling and the pain which a contrary action would have given him during his illness that his colleagues, even at the risk of being misunderstood, delayed a reply. This suspension of judgment in a vital matter is a measure of the respect and affection which his long services and his personality inspired.

This narration, it is hoped, has given the impression of a many-sided man of affairs and of good deeds always anxious to be of use to his fellow-men and of service to the public. But there were many other interests and incidents in his life deserving of at least a word. Convinced that a better distribution of immigration was desirable, he joined in a plan involving large expenditure and much trouble to land immigrants at the port of Galveston in Texas and arrange for their distribution through the South-west. He provided a building for the Young Men's Hebrew Association at 92nd Street and Lexington Avenue, in New York, and interested himself in the growth of similar organizations for men and women. He aided in the building of a large number of synagogues in small towns in the United States, always assuring himself by investigation that the local community was too small to bear the burden itself. He conducted a lively correspondence with Baron de Hirsch, and became one of the trustees of his foundation in America.

He was received in private audience by the king of England in 1904 and by the emperor of Germany in 1911. He served on the Board of Education of New York, and was vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce. In 1893 he anonymously gave a fund to Seth Low to enable students of Columbia University who did not possess the means to visit the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. He presented a model of the dinosaur in the American Museum of Natural History to the Natural History Society of Frankfort. He was chairman of the East Asiatic section of the American Museum of Natural History, provided the funds for an Ethnological Expedition to China, and made gifts to the Zoological Gardens in Bronx Park. He interested himself in the development of Cooper Union, and presented a fountain to Seward Park. He took part in the movement to create a park at 105th Street in memory of Isidor and Ida Straus, whose heroic death at the sinking of the Titanic produced a profound impression, and presided at the dedication. He was for a number of years a member of the Board of Managers of the New York Zoological Society and of the Board of Directors of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

He was keenly interested in the education and development of the colored race, made a number of large contributions to Tuskegee and other colored institutions, and maintained a close friendship with Booker T. Washington and his successor, Major Moton.

His early association with the Jewish Prisoners' Aid Society developed his deep interest in the problem of delinquency, and led to his being one of the founders of the Jewish Protectory and Aid Society, to which he gave a substantial portion of its original building fund. This Society now covers the entire field of delinquency among the Jews of New York, both male and female, adult and juvenile. He was also very much interested in the work of the Prison Association of New York (non-sectarian under Protestant auspices), of which he was one of the vice-presidents at the time of his death.

He gave hearty support to the work of the Hebrew Free Loan Association, as he thoroughly believed in constructive rather than palliative assistance. With this same thought in mind, he founded the Self-Support and Self-Help Funds of the United Hebrew Charities, which he maintained single-handed by large annual contributions.

He earnestly advocated cooperation among those serving the sick, as evidenced by the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, on the Committee of which he served for many years.

The tale of good deeds is not to be numbered, and if this story is told aright there has been awakened an interest in the personality of the man himself.

On May 6, 1875, he married Theresa, the daughter of Solomon and Betty Loeb, people of great sweetness of life and disposition. Mrs. Loeb was very much interested in the development of music, and herself sent many students abroad to have their talents cultivated. The relationship of members of the family to the foundation of the Musical Arts Society is probably due to her influence. The first impulse toward Mr. Schiff's interest in the work of district nursing also came from Mrs. Loeb. To Mr. and Mrs. Schiff were born two children—Mortimer L. and Frieda. The former, a member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. since 1900, was closely associated with his father in his business and other activities, the latter married Felix M. Warburg, also now a member of the firm and distinguished for his philanthropic work. With Mrs. Schiff's parents, their brothers and sisters, and with their own children, and later grandchildren and great grandchildren, a wonderfully sweet domestic life grew up of which as the elders passed, Mr. Schiff became the centre. In the midst of modern surroundings he maintained a relationship with all the members of his family which may be fairly likened in its dignity and simplicity to that of the patriarchs.

Mr. Schiff was short of stature, of medium build and erect carriage. He had blue eyes capable of expressing compassion or indignation. He wore a beard which had laterly grown white and was always carefully dressed appropriately for every occasion. A flower usually graced his button-hole.

Promptness was a distinguishing trait. He was always on time for an engagement, and answered every letter on the day of its receipt. He exacted promptness in return. He hated waste, saved pieces of wrapping paper and string, and used them to pack up with his own hands the newspapers and magazines which he collected in his house and which daily he sent to various hospitals and prisons.

He was a moderate, even a frugal eater for the last twenty years of his life. His exercise in the city was walking; he always walked from his house at 78th Street to 59th Street and sometimes as far as 14th Street before taking the subway to his office. At Seabright, his country place, he bicycled every afternoon—even after he had attained his seventieth year. At Bar Harbor he took long walks, and did a bit of mountain-climbing up to the summer of 1919.

He enjoyed the opera and the theatre, and usually planned to have three evenings of entertainment in the week.

In his house on Fifth Avenue he had good pictures and good books, but was in no sense a collector of either, though he took pleasure in his collection of jade.

His place at Seabright which he enlarged and rebuilt was a great delight to him. The farm, the stock, the gardens, the walks, the splendid alley of trees which he planted he was fond of showing to his guests. His hospitality was delightful; every individual's tastes and peculiarities were studied and provided for. Early every morning he was in his gardens, and himself brought to each lady of the household a rose or some other flower of the season.

He remembered innumerable people's birthdays and wedding anniversaries by a gift, a note or a telegram; and when he sent a gift it was quite certain that he had personally made the selection.

If a friend visited New York he called or left a card, or if one were ill he promptly made a visit to show his solicitude and friendship. For all the nice attentions of life he always found time, in spite of exacting business and public duties.

He was accessible to all people on all subjects, though not easily persuaded when his mind was fixed.

He was frankly gratified at a friend's appreciation. On January 10, 1917, his seventieth birthday, he wrote: "May I say to you that I am deeply touched by your beautiful, if to some extent at least, unmerited appreciation of my life upon my attainment this day of the Biblical Age. God has blessed me so lavishly that had I done less in the years that are now behind me than it was my privilege to do I should feel no respect for myself, but that I have gained the respect and good will of men like you is certainly the highest reward I can wish for." Again he wrote: "I care very much for the good opinion and good will of my friends."

He was a loyal friend to many men in the business world—Harriman and Cassatt have been mentioned. General Wilson was a close and dear friend and a frequent companion, President Eliot has already been spoken of. A phrase in a letter from Abram S. Hewitt (Nov. 21, 1901) speaks volumes: "Among the friends whom I have made in the evening of my life no one has endeared himself to me by acts of courtesy and friendship more than yourself." Levi P. Morton, Jacob Riis, James J. Hill and many still among the living he numbered in this company and he greatly valued their good opinion. With Sir Ernest Cassel, whom he originally met in a business way, he formed an especially close friendship which many differences in life and opinions never marred and which was close and intimate in spite of the dividing ocean.

He was fond of travel—crossed the American continent five times, made twenty trips to Europe, visited Egypt, Palestine, and Algiers, and took long motor trips in America and Europe. When air travel was still in its infancy he made an ascent in a Zeppelin, and wrote notes from that conveyance to a number of friends. This was much for a man of his conservative nature to undertake, for he was fond of the old things, and his horses only slowly made way for the swifter motor.

He was earnest and impressive as a public speaker, had a fine sense of humor and skill in illustrating a point by an appropriate anecdote or to enforce it by means of a pungent witticism. He attended the annual meetings of the many organizations with which he was affiliated and expressed his personal appreciation of the manner in which the officers and boards performed their duties. His encouragement and appreciation to all who performed a public service included those in the humblest circumstances. He hated injustice and frowned upon all conduct that savored of self-seeking, disloyalty and dishonorable practices. His standards were high yet he was charitable in his judgments. He mingled with men of every shade of thought and natives of all parts of the world. He showed great interest in the well-being of his fellow-men and evinced solicitude and affection toward his intimates.

He had a charming way with little children and made close friends among them.

He was averse to public attention and when he reached the age of seventy and many societies and innumerable admirers indicated the purpose to do him honor he slipped away from New York with his family to Atlantic City. Personal modesty was a distinguishing characteristic. He cared little for distinctions and social preferment held no charms for him, though he was sought after in many circles both for his qualities of heart and mind.

He was very democratic in his dealings with men. His office was always open, and he received innumerable visits at his home from all sorts and conditions of men for the discussion of all sorts of subjects. Yet he had the pride of noble antecedents—of a great family and of a people which had distinguished itself by giving to the world a sublime literature and many men of genius.

He prized the degree of Doctor of Commercial Science which was conferred upon him by New York University in 1916 in the following terms: "JACOB HENRY SCHIFF: In this land of your adoption you have won a place of acknowledged leadership in financial and commercial pursuits. For enterprise and breadth of vision, for probity and worth, for the patronage of learning; for fidelity to the best traditions of your race and for altruistic service that transcends the boundaries of race and religion, New York University bestows upon you the degree of DOCTOR OF COMMERCIAL SCIENCE and directs that your name be added to the roll of her Alumni."

About this he wrote (Jan. 12, 1916): "I have before this been offered similar honors but no degree, to which I could not claim some justification to receive has attracted me. The D. C. S. was not exposed to this exception and I therefore thought I might accept it."

His health began to fail in the winter of 1920. At no time, however, was he bedridden. In April of that year he went to White Sulphur Springs, in the early summer to White Plains, and in the latter part of July to the White Mountains. Not regaining his strength or sleep, he came back to Seabright and occupied himself with reading, writing, and even going to New York to his office during the last week of his life. He resented help, and by the exercise of his indomitable will was up and about—the veritable Master of the House—until the actual day of his death when he took to his bed and passed away without a struggle, just as the Sabbath concluded.

He was indeed a great man who worthily played his part.

ISRAEL FRIEDLAENDER A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

BY JACOB KOHN

When news of Professor Friedlaender's tragic death in the service of his people burst upon the Jewish world, the whole of Israel shuddered. The baffled heart instinctively uttered the old protest at thought of the scholar's martyrdom: "Zo Torah wezo sekarah," and felt itself doubly bereft in that a lover of his people as well as one of its sages had passed away. Prof. Friedlaender had never been a cloistered scholar, but one whose activity was manifest in many lands of the dispersion and in many spheres of Jewish life and endeavor. In him the scholar and the worker were nobly blended.

He was born in Poland, September 6, 1876, and grew to manhood dowered with the intense Jewish consciousness characteristic of Eastern Jewry and immersed in that sea of Jewish lore and learning which was the breath of its life. In 1896, however, he went to Germany, where larger intellectual vistas opened before him and where the Jewish scholarship he already possessed could be properly clarified and disciplined. He at once entered Berlin University and the Rabbiner Seminar, at which he remained a student till the year 1900. The following year he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Strasbourg, and in 1902 was conspicuously honored by an appointment as Privatdocent in the Department of Semitic Languages.

The companions of his student days in Germany bear testimony to the influence he exerted by his personality, his scholarship, his facility of speech and pen, and his profound sympathy and understanding of Jewish psychology. In the days when Zionist enthusiasm was gripping the hearts of university students and causing in many a young Jewish soul a complete revolution, away from a strident pseudo-Teutonism or a lackadaisical cosmopolitanism toward a fervid Jewish nationalism, a man like Friedlaender naturally became the centre of an admiring circle. At this time also he began his career as a translator, in the desire to interpret some of the Jewish thinkers of Eastern Europe, especially Dubnow and Ahad Ha'am, to the youths who seemed so eager and ready for their doctrines. He was anxious to place into the hands of the Verein der Jüdischer Studenten, whose members showed no little skill with the duellist's rapier, the shining sword of the Jewish spirit. To this end he himself inaugurated several courses in Hebrew and Jewish history, and his efforts bore fruit in the decision of the Society which required a minimum of Jewish study as a qualification for membership.

In 1903 Prof. Schechter invited Dr. Friedlaender to occupy the chair in Biblical Literature and Exegesis at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. Thereafter, America became the immediate scene of his work and activity. Europe, however, had still one important contribution to make to his life. On September 26, 1905, he married Miss Lillian Bentwich of London, England. Her tender devotion, her deep understanding and sympathy for his work and aspirations, and her power of self-effacement helped to smooth the difficult path of his labor, and made possible his final brave sacrifice.

Prof. Friedlaender was never able to rest quietly in academic isolation. His vivid interest in Jewish affairs, his well-developed communal conscience, impelled him to answer the need for men of light and leading so clearly manifest in Jewish life on all sides. A mere list of the movements and institutions with which he was intimately connected suffices to show his keen sense of public duty as well as the main directions in which his interest lay. His paramount concern was Jewish education. He was himself an able teacher in practice and anxious for the development of a right pedagogic system in Jewish schools. But quite apart from his personal contribution to the cause of Jewish education, he gave himself wholeheartedly to the upbuilding of Jewish educational institutions, whether devoted to higher learning or to the less ambitious but more fundamental task of popular instruction. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Educational Alliance. He was chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Bureau of Education of the New York Kehillah, which his influence had helped to call into being and which his energies had helped to guide and develop. The Jewish Publication Society was quick to enlist his aid on its publication committee. His own contributions, his expert advice, his sound literary judgment and his general good taste went to enrich the Society's output.

The influence which Prof. Friedlaender exerted in academic circles in his student days was paralleled by his influence among American students in the days of his maturity. His heart remained tender toward the Jewish youth and especially toward those elements among the Jewish youth which he regarded as the possible torch-bearers of Jewish culture. He was a member of the governing board of the Intercollegiate Menorah Society, high in the councils of the Intercollegiate Zionist Association, and first president of Young Judæa.

Prof. Friedlaender did not permit his preoccupation with Jewish organizations to blind him to the larger problem of Jewish organization. His participation in the Kehillah movement as an active member of its executive committee, the part he played on the American Jewish Committee and the rôle of conciliator which he assumed during the Congress agitation, and the interest he took in organizing the American Jewish Congress, show his realization of the needs and his faith in the possibility of a united American Jewry. He was not discouraged by the fact that the course of events proved none of these organizations to be in possession of the complete formula for the realization of such union. The dogma of the unity of Israel was for him beyond dispute, and he was convinced that the proper organic expression of this unity would one day be found for Israel as a whole as well as for the various Jewries of the Diaspora. This larger unity of Israel he felt to be bound up with the Zionist movement. He was always to be found at the heart and center of Zionist endeavor in America. He was for many years a member of the National Executive Committee of the Federation of American Zionists, and later served on the Provisional Committee for Zionist Affairs when the exigencies of the Great War and the temporary disintegration of European Zionism called that body into being.

The influence of Prof. Friedlaender at public gatherings was a remarkable one. His catholic interest in all the important phases of Jewish life in America made him a familiar figure at Jewish meetings. This familiarity, however, so far from breeding contempt, gave birth to a genuine love only equalled by the respect felt for him by every element of the heterogeneous composite of Jewish life. He spoke and wrote, with equal facility and almost equal felicity of expression, Hebrew, German, and English, and knew Russian and Yiddish; but—what was more important—understood the complex psychology of Jewry as well as the varieties of its speech. He could evaluate and interpret the aspirations of Russian, German, and American Jews. His own personality had been moulded under the influence of all three. Besides, he was almost equally at ease before a learned body, at after-dinner speaking, or when addressing turbulent Jewish masses at meetings and conventions. His method of address was always quiet and soothing in tone and rich in the graceful use of the mashal in many varieties, ancient and modern. When a debate became stormy and beyond control, a word from Prof. Friedlaender would be sure to receive the respectful attention of contending factions and to radiate light in an atmosphere which had hitherto been all heat.

It is difficult to realize that, amidst this profusion of public activity, Prof. Friedlaender continued to live the life of the teacher and the scholar. At the Seminary he taught and expounded the literature of the Bible, and gave courses in the history of the Canon in the various phases of biblical history and archæology. In addition, he read with his students the mediæval Jewish philosophers, a branch of Jewish scholarship which, though not within the scope of his Seminary speciality, had been assigned to him by virtue of his wide acquaintance with Arabic literature in general and Jewish-Arabic texts in particular.

To his task as teacher he brought, besides the treasure of his learning, certain talents recognizable, in part, in his printed lectures and essays, but particularly noticeable in the class-room. He had a gift for popular exposition. One could detect the graceful essayist and the pleasant conversationalist behind the lecturer. The illustrations were always apt and plentiful. As an exegete and critic, he took great pains to assemble all the divergent views on any point, but did not fail to distinguish those views which were based on an interpretation of philological, historical or archæological fact from those which were merely the expression of literary taste and predilection. His own sensitiveness to style and to literary harmonies and discords and his many interesting deductions based on these feelings did not blind him to their subjectivity either in himself or in others. He thus helped his students to evolve sound canons of criticism.

In teaching the mediæval Jewish philosophers, his wide acquaintance with philosophic literature, both ancient and modern, stood him in good stead. It was, however, his thorough knowledge of Arabic philology and Muhammedan theology and philosophy which proved most helpful to his students. The introductory lectures in these courses concerned themselves chiefly with related tendencies in Islam. The Hebrew translations of the works of Maimonides, Judah ha-Levi, and others are often difficult because of the many Arabisms with which they are laden, and the printed texts are often corrupt. Prof. Friedlaender's students soon learned that when they came to a difficult tangle in the Hebrew text, the thing to do was not to indulge in weird philosophic subtleties and to search for profound and hidden depths, but to await the simple Arabic key which would solve the mystery and which Prof. Friedlaender would be sure to have in his possession. Several of his pupils were stimulated to study Arabic; others, including the writer, continued to look to their professor as the "revealer of mysteries."

Prof. Friedlaender's interest in his students, however, was not confined to the stated hours for instruction. His pupils had but to express a wish for some branch of Jewish knowledge, not included in the curriculum, to be sure of his services. For several years he taught Arabic voluntarily to small groups interested in that branch of Semitics, and, on the other hand, many a young man born in this country caught his first glimpse of the fresh green fields of modern Hebrew literature under the guidance of Prof. Friedlaender. The Hebrew prose of Ahad Ha'am was the usual vehicle employed for this introduction, and the reading and elucidation of the text became the occasion for prolonged discussions on the themes of the essays, discussions which continued through the late afternoon and into the darkening day. On those occasions Prof. Friedlaender was not so much the teacher as the disciple, and his enthusiasm, as it communicated itself to his pupils, blotted out the flight of time.

Prof. Friedlaender's contribution in the field of pure scholarship dealt for the most part with Arabic literature, but his main human interest reveals itself in his choice of those subjects which betray Jewish influence or influenced Jewish development. His training in Semitics, which included, besides Hebrew and Arabic, Syriac, Ethiopic, and Assyrian, was achieved under the guidance of that eminent master, Prof. Nöldeke, for whom his brilliant pupil always cherished the highest love and reverence.* Among these Arabic studies mention may be made first of the inaugural address delivered by Prof. Friedlaender at Strasbourg on his appointment as Privatdocent. It was entitled "The Messianic Idea in Islam." Fortunately, this lecture was subsequently translated into English by Prof. Friedlaender himself and included in his collected writings. A work of larger scope, including, however, the matter dealt with in the inaugural lecture, was the book The Heterodoxies of the Shiites according to Ibn Hazm (Reprint from the Journal of the American Oriental Society, volumes 28 and 29), New Haven, 1909. The founder of the Shiite sect, in whose beliefs and traditions Prof. Friedlaender found so many traces of Jewish Messianism, was, according to the Arabic sources themselves, a Jew from Southern Arabia. It was of this Jew and the problems connected with his life and origin that Prof. Friedlaender wrote under the title "Abdallah b. Saba, der Begründer der Schi'a und sein jüdischer Ursprung" in volumes 23 and 24 (1909-10) of the Zeitschrift für Assyriologie. A third book dealing with a hero of Muhammedan folk-lore, the prophet Al-Khadhir, also points to the connection between these folk-tales and the Messianic legends current in Jewish circles. It is entitled Die Chadhirlegende und der Alexanderroman (Leipsic, 1913).

There was also a series of Jewish-Arabic studies published by Prof. Friedlaender which ran through the first three volumes of the Jewish Quarterly Review (New Series). He likewise edited certain Genizah texts of Maimonides and other Judeo-Arabic authorities. The first scientific work of Prof. Friedlaender, however, was his thesis for the Doctorate, entitled Der Sprachgebrauch des Maimonides, which is an Arabic-German glossary of rare words used by Maimonides. In his introduction Prof. Friedlaender vindicates the purity of Maimonides' Arabic style. Certain extracts from the grammatical material which Prof. Friedlaender had collected in connection with this work, but which had never been completely edited and published, can be found in the introduction to his Selections from the Arabic Writings of Maimonides, in the Semitic Study Series (1909). A number of Arabic responsa by Maimonides appeared in several periodicals; but much valuable textual material which Prof. Friedlaender had collected for the Schechter Series, and on which he was at work at the time of his death, has not yet been made public.

In line with these latter studies, though popularly written in the graceful and flowing style which was his as essayist and lecturer, are the lectures on "Maimonides," the first of which was delivered at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, Dec. 28, 1904, on the occasion of the seven-hundredth anniversary of the death of Maimonides; "Maimonides as an Exegete," delivered as one of a series of lectures at the summer meeting of the University Extension movement, Cambridge, England, Aug. 14, 1906; "Maimonides as a Master of Style," published originally in German, Leipzig, 1908. All three of these are included in Past and Present, and are therefore easily accessible to the general reader.

The influence which Prof. Friedlaender exerted on Jewish life, however, is not due primarily to his achievements in historical research. As essayist, publicist, and translator he enriched and refreshed the intellectual atmosphere of modern Jewry. Attention has already been called to the desire which manifested itself in his student days to interpret for the benefit of his western contemporaries those writers in eastern Europe who had particularly influenced his own thinking. His first attempt in this direction was an edition of Dubnow's Die Jüdische Geschichte, which he translated from the Russian into German two years after his arrival in Berlin. In 1905 he translated Grundlage des Nationalen Judentums by the same author. A work much more ambitious but one which was also prompted not so much by an abstract historical interest as by the desire that the western world, Jewish and Gentile, should become better acquainted with the rich and varied life of eastern Jewry was the translation into English of Dubnow's History of the Jews in Russia and Poland. This translation was done largely from the author's manuscript, in part during the years of the Great War when mails were uncertain and the transmission of manuscripts, especially in Russia, was viewed with suspicion and subject to much delay. The painstaking labor required and the exasperating tedium of the long and anxious waits failed to discourage the translator only because he was convinced of the need of the work and because he had entered upon it as a labor of love.

This function of mediatorship between eastern and western Jewry Prof. Friedlaender exercised with warmest love and enthusiasm as an apostle of Ahad Ha'am. To the pupils with whom he read the collected essays of Ahad Ha'am he never failed to point out the importance of this essayist as a master of Hebrew prose, as the champion of cultural Zionism, and as one who not only understood the psychology of the Jewish people, but who, almost for the first time since the birth of the Haskalah, brought psychological rather than purely rationalistic criteria to bear on the interpretation of Jewish phenomena. As a teacher he could reach only a limited circle. He therefore published a collection of essays by Ahad Ha'am in a German translation. These essays were widely circulated, and several of them were in turn rendered into other languages.

In translating Dubnow's History, Prof. Friedlaender's motive was not solely admiration of the author's work or even the general desire to acquaint the western world with the story of so important a branch of the family of Israel. He was always keenly conscious of the significance of contemporaneous history, of the dire need created by present circumstances, and he never felt that the disinterested service of that need had other than a high claim upon the true scholar. That he was conscious of such service in the translation referred to is evident from these words in the preface: "The want of a work of this kind has long been keenly felt by those interested in Jewish life or Jewish letters, never more keenly than to-day when the world conflagration has thrown into ghastly relief the tragic plight of the largest Jewry of the Diaspora." His own heart, so keenly touched by this plight that it finally rendered up its life to ameliorate the woe, felt that to make the world understand the struggles of Russian and Poland Jewry, its age-long wrongs and its heroic endurance, would be the surest way to procure justice.

This keen awareness of the possibilities of post-war readjustment, this pervasive sensitiveness to the sufferings of his contemporaries in eastern Europe, led him also to hasten the publication of his own work, The Jews of Russia and Poland: a Bird's-eye View of Their History and Culture (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1915), even while yet engaged in preparing the proofs of the fuller history by Dubnow. Dr. Friedlaender himself disclaims any attempt on his part to offer new and independent results of investigation (preface to Dubnow, p. 6). He says: "My natural reluctance to anticipate Mr. Dubnow's large work was overcome by the encouragement of several friends, among them Mr. Dubnow himself, who from their knowledge of public affairs thought that a succinct, popular presentation of the destinies of the Jews in the eastern war area was a word in due season." This readable little history, in whose pages many an American Jew has caught his first view of the trend and spirit of Jewish history in eastern Europe, was based upon a course of lectures delivered at the Dropsie College in Philadelphia in March, 1915, and shows Prof. Friedlaender in the light of the popular historian and the inspired publicist, who knows how to speak the "word in due season" when the cause he loves requires a spokesman.

The book from which the average reader will best be able to judge Prof. Friedlaender's style, the wide range of his interest in Jewish life and thought, and his views on the great controversial questions which agitate the modern Jew is the collection of essays entitled Past and Present. The author explains the spirit of the volume very aptly in the preface: "While the diversity of subjects treated in this volume is undoubtedly due—as it is in every collection of essayists—to the personal equation of the author, representing the range of his literary and public interests, yet I venture to claim that the thoughtful reader will be able to detect the common bond which links all the essays together and transforms the apparently heterogeneous mass of material into one homogeneous whole. The volume is based upon the fundamental conception of Judaism as a living organism, which is one and indivisible at all times and climes; changing and yet unchanged; harking back to a great past and struggling in the midst of a harassing present towards a glorious future. That conception views Israel as a community in which the religious and the racial elements are inseparably intertwined with one another, in which the universal ideals and the national aspirations form a harmonious combination—a combination which can be realized only through the untrammelled and unhindered development of the Jewish genius on a Jewish soil.”

These charming and stimulating essays in their variety of theme and treatment reveal the various aspects of the author's personality as well as his dominant point of view. Such essays as “The Political Ideals of the Prophets,” “The Prophet Jeremiah,” “The Messianic Idea in Islam,” and the essays dealing with Maimonides, are masterly expositions, graceful and intelligible, of scholarly themes. They reflect the gift which made Prof. Friedlaender a teacher in circles far wider than the class-room. “The Present Jewish Outlook in Russia,” “The Problem of Jewish Education in America,” “The Present Crisis in American Jewry,” and essays of a similar nature show another side of Prof. Friedlaender's spiritual nature, an aptness for dealing with a present situation, of analyzing the various factors in a problem close at hand which is seldom possessed by a mind devoted to abstract scholarship or to historical research. Even the suavity of the graceful essayist gives place to a certain fire, a polemical heat which only emphasizes the deftness of the writer in debate, in such essays as “Were Our Ancestors Capable of Self-Government?” or “A New Specimen of Modern Biblical Exegesis.” The author's own point of view is most clearly traceable in his discussion of “Race and Religion,” “Palestine and the Diaspora,” and similar themes. We might describe it, in view of what we have already said of the author's relation to Ahad Ha'am and Dubnow, as a synthetic view of Jewish nationalism containing elements of the “spiritual nationalism” of Dubnow, the cultural Zionism of Ahad Ha'am, and the political vision of Herzl—a true synthesis, not a mere composite, made possible by a largeness of view and a sensitive historic consciousness.

The restoration of Zion did not, in Prof. Friedlaender's opinion, involve the abolition of the Diaspora. He realized that the bulk of the Jewish people would in all probability continue to dwell among the nations of the world. Hence the problems of the Diaspora were not to be thrust aside as belonging to the sphere of the temporary and the ephemeral. Dr. Friedlaender sums up his position in the phrase: "Zionism plus the Diaspora." In the midst of this wide-flung dispersion, he was convinced that the Jewry of America was to play a leading part. There is a hint of this point of view in the preface to Past and Present. "The author, moreover, thoroughly shares the view which is held and has frequently been expressed by many thinking Jews of Europe, that America is destined to become in the near future the leading Jewish center of the Diaspora and that it is the duty of American Jewry to live up to the great obligation placed upon it by history. . . . Zionism plus Diaspora, Palestine plus America—these formulæ express in a nutshell the leading thoughts of the present volume." The same thought is again alluded to in these words: "America has, in less than one generation, become the second largest center of the Jewish Diaspora, and bids fair to become the first, instead of the second, within another generation. No other country in the world offers, even approximately, such a favorable combination of opportunities for the development of a Diaspora Judaism, as does America; economic possibilities, vast and sparsely populated territories, freedom of action, liberty of conscience, equality of citizenship, appreciation of the fundamentals of Judaism, variety of population, excluding a rigidly nationalistic state policy, and other similar factors" (p. 341). Indeed it might be said that the purpose of the essays in Past and Present, dealing with American conditions, is to arouse in the American Jew a realization of his spiritual opportunity and hence a sense of his spiritual obligation to Judaism and civilization.

Prof. Friedlaender was murdered by bandits in the Ukraine on July 5, 1920. He had left his wife and children and the safety of America to bring material relief and spiritual sympathy to his brothers in the turbulent, war-wrecked lands. He turned his back on Warsaw and the semi-security of Polish cities to hasten to the scene of direst distress. On the way, he and his companion, Dr. Cantor, were wantonly struck down.

To ask oneself what service Prof. Friedlaender might have rendered to his people, had he been spared to them—in that direction madness lies. The cause of higher Jewish learning, the needs of popular Jewish education in the Diaspora, the urgencies of the Palestine situation with its important Arabic element—all called to him, and all could have employed to their advantage his manifold gifts. Though his heart beat high with Israel's hope in the land of promise, he was willing to serve humbly to allay the agonies of the present amid the grim realities of the "wilderness of the nations." In his death the Jewry of America, the Jewry of the world, loses a teacher, an interpreter, a friend.

May the memory of the righteous be a blessing!

ABRAM S. ISAACS

BY LEWIS M. ISAACS

Abram S. Isaacs was born in New York City on August 30, 1851, the youngest son of the Rev. Samuel M. Isaacs, who was one of the first Jewish Rabbis in this country to preach in English. His eldest brother was the late Judge Myer S. Isaacs, largely identified with Jewish affairs during his long and active career. Isaac S. Isaacs, also a prominent lawyer and a life-long partner of Judge Isaacs, actively connected from its inception with the United Hebrew Charities of New York and other communal organizations, was another brother.

Dr. Isaacs received his education at the New York University, from which he was graduated, with highest honors, in 1871. Later he went abroad to complete his rabbinical studies at Breslau. Reared in a home where life and religion were inseparable, he was early imbued with that rare and fine appreciation of the underlying and essential tenets of his faith which so distinguished his sermons and writings in later years. Following in his father's footsteps he became a Rabbi and a teacher, filling for a number of years the pulpit at Barnett Memorial Temple at Paterson, New Jersey. For upwards of thirty-five years he occupied a chair at the New York University, first as Professor of Hebrew, then of Germanic languages, and later of Semitics; and at the time of his death he was the second oldest professor, in years of service, at the University. In 1878 he received from his Alma Mater the degree of Ph. D. honoris causa.

In addition to his work in the pulpit and University, Dr. Isaacs, from 1878, edited The Jewish Messenger, a weekly publication devoted to Jewish communal affairs, which had been founded in 1857 by his father and elder brothers, and wielded a genuine influence for good for almost fifty years. It became merged in The American Hebrew in 1903, at which time Dr. Isaacs withdrew from editorial work. During all these years he was a frequent contributor to the leading periodicals of the country, not only on phases of Judaism and Jewish problems, but also on topics of general literary interest. His first volume, A Modern Hebrew Poet: The Life and Writings of Moses Chaim Luzzatto, published in 1878, exhibited his extensive knowledge and power of expression.

Several books from his pen have been published by The Jewish Publication Society: Step by Step (1910), dealing with the life and time of Moses Mendelssohn; The Young Champion (1913), based on the life of Grace Aguilar; Under the Sabbath Lamp, a series of short stories on Jewish subjects (1919). At the time of his death a manuscript entitled School Days in Our Home Town and dealing in a charming way with episodes in his early life, during which his father conducted a Jewish school, was in the hands of the Society for publication. In addition, he published a volume of essays, What is Judaism? (Putnam, 1912), and Stories from the Rabbis (Bloch, 1894), which latter volume has passed through several editions. For both editions of the Encyclopedia Americana he edited the Semitic department. He was also a writer of simple and appealing verse. One of the best known of the hymns in the Union Hymnal ("A Noble Life, a Simple Faith") was from his pen.

In later years Dr. Isaacs added to his many other spheres of activity that of lecturer; and his simple, unaffected manner, combined with solid scholarship and interesting material, made him a prominent figure in this field. Among the subjects which he covered were "The Synagogue in Different Countries," "Holland and the Art of Joseph Israels," "The Child at School in Many Lands," "An Evening with Heine," and "The Art of Max Liebermann."

Dr. Isaacs died at Paterson, N. J., on December 22, 1920.

No more fitting tribute can be paid to Dr. Isaacs than the very beautiful letter written to his family, at the time of his demise, by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman, on behalf of the Association of Reform Rabbis. The following is an extract therefrom: "He was not only the ideal priest and the active preacher of righteousness, but he maintained the noble tradition which his father, whose fragrant memory is a precious possession of the Jewish community of this city, bequeathed to him. For many years, he effectively influenced Judaism by his editorship of The Jewish Messenger. His predominant interests were intellectual, those of the scholar. He enriched our American Jewish literature by the books he wrote, which brought home the truths of our faith, with simplicity, but also with power, to the hearts of his readers. He combined loyalty to Judaism with broad culture, and he exemplified in his life this harmony of intensity of Jewish faith and catholicity of intellectual interests in the way he maintained his position in the academic world, by his professorship, for many years, in the New York University.

He rendered, as minister and as man, a fruitful service to American Judaism. And by his beautiful soul, he was its eloquent representative to the non-Jewish world. The heritage of American Jewish life for the coming generation is enriched by the impress of his personality. He has left us a noble memorial of himself, as the faithful, modest, self-sacrificing Jewish scholar and gentleman. Bearing a distinguished family name, he has added lustre to it, by the high standards which he embodied in his own character and service."

JEWISH AMERICANIZATION AGENCIES

BY CHARLES S. BERNHEIMER

INTRODUCTORY

Within recent years serious students of social and political problems in American life have become interested in investigating the manner in which the numerous congeries of diverse nationalities are being welded into the American nation. These studies have applied particularly to the hundreds of thousands of immigrants who have arrived during the past quarter of a century. How and to what extent have these immigrants adapted themselves to those of the characteristics and ideals of the nation which are generally regarded as essentially national traits? Have they, in the process of adapting and adjusting themselves to new conditions in this country, added to these characteristics, so that they are able to point to a constructive program of helpfulness to later arrivals? We will endeavor to indicate the answers to these questions as respects the Jewish communities of the United States, in order to show to what extent the Jews of this country have recognized that they owe a duty toward their immigrant brethren and a responsibility toward the nation which has welcomed them.

In discussing the process of adaptation and adjustment generally called Americanization, it must be borne in mind that there is no single formula; that Americanism as an ideal or set of ideals does not necessarily correspond to all practices of Americans, and that the immigrants themselves are constantly contributing towards the expansion and enrichment of the connotations of Americanism.

While Americanization has been defined as the process by which an alien acquires our language, citizenship, ideals, and an appreciation and love for American traits, the question may be raised as to whether true Americanism necessitates, on the part of the immigrant, the adoption of certain habits and customs, such as our method of preparing food, certain distinctive styles of clothing, and the like. While it is true that those who become Americans will want to conform in many of these matters, it may safely be said that the all-important thing is the adoption of the "spirit of America," and not mere outward conformity to certain habits and customs. It may even be said that although the English language is an important element, its acquirement is of itself not as vital as the attaining of the ideals of social welfare, righteousness, and justice which are the determining characteristics of the spirit of the nation. The newcomer must strive to obtain an appreciation of these ideals, and must at the same time endeavor to contribute towards their enrichment.

The history, ethics, and ideals of the Jews have made them peculiarly impressionable to American ideals, and have enabled them, from the very beginning of American history, to make important contributions in this direction. In an admirable study,<sup>1</sup> Oscar S. Straus, speaking of the Hebrew Commonwealth which preceded the establishment of the monarchy under Saul, says: "This scriptural model government which was democratic, . . . had a deep influence upon the founders of our government and prepared the minds of the people, especially in the New England colonies, so that they not only longed for, but would not content themselves with any other form of government than that form which had the divine sanction, the government of the Hebrews under the Judges." In his volume on the spiritual life of the American people,<sup>2</sup> Dr. Stanton Coit devotes an entire chapter to the "Jews in America." He says that the Jews "see an astonishing likeness between that Moral Genius of their own race which they have worshipped and the Moral Genius that is revealing itself in American institutions and history."

That the Jew actually contributes to the ideals of America is attested by many students of immigrant nationalities. It is impossible, however, to go into this phase of the matter within the limits of this article, the purpose of which is to describe those Jewish agencies which are devoted to the Americanization of Jewish newcomers.

The most recent estimate of the Jewish population of the United States placed the number at about three million. It has been computed that about one-third of this number are foreign-born. The latter came to these shores because of religious persecution or economic oppression, and they required the assistance of their coreligionists already here, who responded with energy, intelligence, and good will. Immediately upon the arrival of considerable numbers of Jews from Russia, Roumania, and Austria-Hungary, in the eighties of the past century, many societies were organized for the aid of the immigrants. Organizations sprang up which first provided for the immediate material needs of the immigrant, assisted him in securing a livelihood, and aided him in adjusting himself to his new surroundings.

It is not necessary to enter here into the details of the work done by the various Jewish communities of the United States in the building up of organizations and societies for the social betterment of the immigrant Jewish population; nor is it the aim of this paper to show how leaders of the Jewish community have actively participated in the solution of problems relating to the settlement of immigrants of various nationalities in this country. The following pages will be confined to the description of the various types of Jewish institutions, educational, social, and religious, which have helped the Jewish immigrant to become a member of the American commonwealth.

Of the various kinds of organizations the educational agency has a far greater appeal to Jewish immigrants than the social, which helps rather to assimilate the adult immigrant indirectly through his children. "Of all immigrants," says John Daniels, "the Jews run most distinctly to educational organizations, in which, although social and recreational features are present, first place is given to immediate instruction through classes, text books, lectures and debates. In every Jewish neighborhood of any size educational societies which are really local in character spring up, usually in great profusion."<sup>3</sup>

Whatever movement has had in view the promotion of a wholesome social life in an atmosphere of Americanism, whether it be the community, social, or recreation center of the public educational system, the social settlement conducted under private auspices, the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association, or the Jewish community center, it has had an enthusiastic and satisfying response on the part of Jewish immigrants and their children, particularly Jewish young people. The clubs and classes, the lectures and forums, the gymnasiums, outings and camps, the neighborhood and civic gatherings, the entertainments, concerts, and dances, the music, art, dramatic, and cultural programs, and all the other features of neighborhood centers have met with great success in sections of the communities in which Jews reside. It has been recognized throughout the country that the activities of the social centers and settlements have received warmer response and enthusiasm from young Jews than from any one other element of our population; that Jewish young people have been a great factor in the organization and maintenance of young people's clubs and self-governing organizations; and that the social, literary, educational, and civic functions undertaken by these settlements and centers have been a potent force in placing thousands of Jewish young men and women in a wholesome environment.

EDUCATIONAL CENTERS

One of the earliest forces projected under Jewish auspices for assisting the Jewish immigrant in adapting himself to American conditions was the Educational Alliance of New York City. The Educational Alliance has been functioning for the last thirty years on the lower East Side of New York City, a section in which the Jewish immigrant population has always been a large element. Americanization has been the keynote of the Educational Alliance throughout its development. The late Isidor Straus, for many years president of the Alliance, outlined the policy of the institution as follows: "We strive to help immigrants to understand American ideas—the dignity of American citizenship; to appreciate the American atmosphere of obedience to law and to recognize the rule of the majority." Similarly, Mr. Lee Kohns, vice-president of the Alliance, said: "Our aim is to Americanize without dejudaizing the immigrant and his children."<sup>4</sup>

The Alliance, like several other Jewish organizations which assumed the responsibility of providing for the adaptation of large numbers of immigrants coming to the United States three and four decades ago, concentrated its attention on the work of educating foreigners. It helped to point the way to the public educational authorities as to means by which systematic education for foreigners could be established. The results achieved by the Educational Alliance and by similar organizations eventually led to the opening of classes for immigrants under public auspices. Referring to this matter, Mr. Kohns said: "We have been pioneers in the establishment of much that was subsequently relinquished to other organized agencies. Our method of teaching English to foreigners has been adopted by the Board of Education—as has been our evening class for immigrants. Our graded classes for immigrant children are now carried on in the municipal day schools. Our special summer evening classes in English for immigrants met a similar fate in being abandoned to the Board of Education, which now continues them throughout the year." The Alliance gave up many of its classes of "English to foreigners" when the Board of Education adopted the function of organizing such classes. It still continues, however, with classes in English and citizenship for those who especially need its assistance. It also conducts lectures in English and Yiddish, and maintains adult organizations, including a mothers' club and a mothers' forum. It is not necessary to go into detail as to the educational, social, physical, and religious activities which take place in this large institution. Mention should only be made of the motion pictures, the dramatic, musical, and social entertainments, often attended by more than five hundred persons at a time, the swarms on the roof garden, the attendance at the summer activities, the vacation camps, the large numbers of meetings, the clubs and other activities sponsored by the Alliance. It will be clearly seen that the Alliance is a large social institution functioning in the midst of a great Jewish population and that thousands upon thousands of this population have been influenced by its comprehensive activities.

Another outstanding organization promoting Americanization activities is the Chicago Hebrew Institute. The Institute's conception of its duty towards promoting Americanism is well exemplified by a survey it made in 1916-1917. Its purpose was to ascertain facts regarding approximately twelve hundred adult Jews of foreign birth who resided in the ward in which the Institute is located. The Institute organized a "Bureau of Civics and Citizenship" to advise and assist aliens to become naturalized citizens; and in connection therewith conducts lectures on American history and government. The Bureau has under its supervision a "New Citizens League" composed of men and women who have secured assistance from the Bureau. It is organized for the purpose of promoting civic welfare in the neighborhood. From the Bureau radiate activities, meetings, lectures and celebrations—which assist in making the Institute an important element in the community in the process of Americanization. The Institute published a series of “news letters,” each with an illustration, one of which was entitled “A Citizenship Laboratory.” It said: “Do you know that your Institute is the only public or private agency giving regular daily instruction in citizenship, six times a week, fifty-two weeks a year? . . . that the Citizenship Department is the objective through which all other departments operate? . . . that thousands of men and women during the past years have been instructed in the English language four nights each week through the entire year? The Institute purposes that intelligent patriotism shall permeate every department of its activities.” Another “news letter,” entitled “3000 Children Sing the Star Spangled Banner,” described the activities of the Institute in the celebration of American holidays. The Institute is a Jewish cultural, educational and social agency with clubs, classes and activities of various kinds.

The Brooklyn Jewish community maintains a social center in Brownsville, a densely populated Jewish district. The Hebrew Educational Society performs a function in this district similar to that of the Educational Alliance on the lower East Side in Manhattan. Its work is naturally on a smaller scale. Like the Alliance, it was one of the pioneer organizations for the teaching of English, and the promotion of civic, educational and religious activities. It has for many years conducted classes in citizenship besides “English to foreigners” classes. It also provides lectures on political and social conditions of this country; it conducts a mothers’ club, which is a valuable means of acquainting foreign-born Jewish mothers with conditions affecting their children, and aids them in meeting the problems that arise by reason of a difference of point of view between the parents who are influenced by old-world ideas, and their children who are affected by ideas of the new world. Like similar clubs it has been a vitalizing Americanizing influence in connection with the various campaigns and "drives" conducted during the World War.

In Philadelphia, the Hebrew Education Society has for many years been a center of educational and religious work among the immigrant Jewish population of that city. In its care for the welfare of thousands of Jewish immigrants year after year it occupies a deservedly distinguished place among the Americanizing agencies which welcomed the Jewish immigrants upon their arrival on our shores.

The Central Jewish Institute of New York City is a Jewish center which lays great stress on Jewish education and culture in its community work. It includes in its activities social and recreational provision, celebrates American historical, as well as Jewish, holidays, and fosters a genial neighborhood spirit which adjusts itself to American conditions as well as to the demands of Jewish community life.

There is at present a tendency on the part of Jewish congregations to establish Jewish "centers." The aim of these centers is to broaden the religious and educational activities of the congregations so as to provide social opportunities for the younger people. The club, the entertainment, the play, the dance, the gymnasium become features of these centers of synagogue and school extension. The Jewish Center of New York is the most prominent exponent of this type. Another center of similar character is the Institutional Synagogue of New York City, in which the synagogue is the basis of educational, social and community work, including lectures, meetings, and celebrations promotive of American ideals. Cleveland, Brooklyn and other communities have organized similar Jewish centers. Altogether, one can see a distinct movement, more particularly among congregations of Jewish conservative tendencies, toward developing social and cultural opportunities for young people.

SETTLEMENTS AND NEIGHBORHOOD CENTERS

The Commission of Immigration of the State of New York, of which Mr. Louis Marshall was chairman, referring to settlements, institutional churches, educational associations, clubs, and recreation centers as "Forces of Assimilation," stated: "The settlements have devoted themselves to a large extent to interpreting the alien to the community at large. In the opinion of these friends of the alien, respect for his fine traditional qualities tends more rapidly to make of him a good American, and to understand the genius of our institutions than he would by attempts to instill American traditions and nothing else. Opportunities for service to the alien on the part of the organizations referred to are met by classes, lectures and clubs, but largely by personal association."<sup>5</sup>

The University Settlement of New York City, which has been a social factor on the lower East Side for over thirty-five years, may be cited as a pioneer in Americanization. It has always been under non-sectarian auspices, though its present headworker, several assistant headworkers, and some of its residents, as well as a number of its leaders of clubs and other activities, are Jews. It has exerted a valuable socializing influence among the Jews of the neighborhood. Large numbers of young men and women, sons and daughters of Jewish immigrants, have through its activities come into contact with Americanizing influences which their own homes could not offer. The Settlement has been their clubhouse, their gathering-place for dances, concerts, and entertainments, for holding debates and discussions on current topics, for attending educational and cultural lectures, for athletics, and for all the wholesome diversions which young men and women desire in the most critical period of their growth. The Settlement has published a number of studies relating to Jewish immigration and neighborhood problems.

Throughout her narrative telling of the manifold activities of the Henry Street Settlement, Miss Lillian D. Wald,<sup>6</sup> its projector and head, brings out the response of the Jewish people to its cultural, educational, civic, and social influences. Her narrative gives an interesting account of the participation of the Jewish youth of the neighborhood in the dramatic and musical activities of the Settlement which found an outlet in the Neighborhood Playhouse, opened in February, 1915.

The Jewish settlements are similar to those under non-sectarian auspices. There is usually a resident headworker with a small staff of assistants and a number of volunteer workers. The activities include clubs, classes, social and athletic functions, religious services, outings and camps, and contact with the people of the immediate neighborhood, thereby establishing a personal, neighborhood and community relationship.

Federation Settlement, located in the upper East Side of New York, includes as part of its civic work circles for the promotion of Americanism, lectures on citizenship, participation in the removal of neighborhood abuses, and the furthering of improvements in the immediate locality. Its educational program is outlined as follows: "It conducts classes in domestic arts, domestic science, music, drawing, dramatics, handicrafts, carpentry. It maintains a kindergarten and a library, and conducts classes in English to foreigners under the auspices of the Board of Education." There are also recreational, religious, philanthropic, and neighborhood programs. These are fairly typical of the Jewish settlements generally and of the sisterhoods conducted along settlement lines. The agencies under distinctly Jewish auspices in New York City are: Emanu El Brotherhood, Recreation Rooms and Settlement, Sisterhood of Spanish and Portuguese Synagogues, Stuyvesant Neighborhood House, Welcome House (part of the Hannah Lavanburg Home), Beth El Sisterhood, Emanu El Sisterhood, Henry Meinhard Memorial House, Temple Israel Sisterhood, and Bronx House. The settlements and the sisterhoods usually conduct "English to foreigners" classes. The organizations ordinarily maintain the rooms, and assist in securing pupils, while the Board of Education provides the instructors and supplies.

Each of these organizations usually includes a mothers' club. The Jewish mothers' club of the settlement and community center has been a potent means of Americanization. Here opportunity is given to discuss the problems of Jewish young people, to smooth the way for co-operation between parents and children, to point out to the parents the necessity for a tolerant attitude toward young people as they grow up amid conditions in this country quite different from those in the old country, and to point out to the young people that they must not be too impatient of the lack of adaptation of their parents to conditions which are strange to them. The mothers' clubs were a factor in the various "drives" and campaigns incident to the recent war. They have been the medium of home economy, health, housing, and neighborhood improvement. The influence of these mothers' clubs naturally permeates that of their immediate neighborhoods so that they have had a most helpful Americanizing influence among the adult Jewish population.

The Neighborhood Center of Philadelphia is co-operating with other social agencies in an attempt to raise standards of social work in Philadelphia. The settlement includes among its activities classes in English and citizenship and in a number of educational, domestic science, art, and cultural subjects, as well as clubs for various age groups. The Kearney Community Center of Philadelphia is a non-sectarian social agency organized by a group of Jews. It utilizes a public school in a Jewish neighborhood of Philadelphia for social and recreation purposes, and is a pioneer of the public school community center plan in that city.

In addition to the Hebrew Institute, Chicago maintains the Jewish Educational Alliance; and in the newly developed section of Chicago, the Lawndale district, several centers have been organized by the community. Among these are the Lawndale Civic Center, Temple Judea Social Center, Herzl Community Center and Lawson Community Center. The last two mentioned have especially co-operated with public schools. The Maxwell Settlement was for a number of years a very active influence in the West Side section of Chicago. With the removal of the Jewish population to a very considerable extent from this section to the Lawndale District, the Maxwell Settlement devoted part of its program to Lawndale until it gave up its activities.

In Cincinnati, the Jewish Settlement is responsible for having organized, nearly two decades ago, the first classes in that city in citizenship and in teaching English to foreigners. The Settlement has laid stress upon the use of Yiddish as a means of Americanization and has conducted lectures on American history and civics in Yiddish. It maintains a class in citizenship, graduation from which is accepted in the naturalization court in lieu of the usual examination. There are several classes in citizenship and in "English to foreigners" conducted by the Board of Education in public schools in the settlement neighborhood. The immigrant's co-operation has here been emphasized, and his ideas are frequently considered in connection with the Americanization activities.

The Jewish agencies of St. Louis have organized an Americanization Council of Jewish Agencies, one of whose functions is the establishment of classes for teaching English to the immigrant Jewish population. The Council has appointed an organizer, and maintains an office in furtherance of its plans. It co-operates with the public educational authorities, who are establishing the classes. One of the most noted of these Jewish agencies is the Jewish Educational and Charitable Association of St. Louis, which conducts a social settlement among other activities. In a study of "The Immigrant in St. Louis," Miss Ruth Crawford says: "By far the most complete and effective piece of social work being done for the immigrant in St. Louis radiates from the Jewish Alliance. Of course, the direct benefit is derived only by the Jewish immigrant; but, indirectly, as a community asset and as an example of a consistently constructed program for immigrant betterment, its value cannot be overestimated.”<sup>7</sup>

In Detroit, the Board of Education opened night schools and special afternoon classes for women for the study of English. The attendance was very small, and there was little interest or enthusiasm. The United Jewish Charities, with an educational director of Americanization in charge, conducted a house to house survey explaining the purpose and value of attending these classes. It also arranged with the Board of Education to provide a special teacher to entertain the small children while the women attended the classes in English. This plan worked exceedingly well, and there was a marked increase in the attendance of the Jewish population in the night schools and afternoon classes for women. Upon the recommendation of the Jewish organization, additional classes have been opened in districts where none were held before. At present the only classes conducted in the city are those in the districts where immigrant Jews reside, all others having been closed on account of lack of attendance. In connection with these classes, mothers' clubs were organized, and by arrangement with the recreation commission, the children were entertained while the mothers attended the meetings.

The formal Americanization activities of the Council Educational Alliance of Cleveland, Ohio, include two mothers' English classes, a mothers' club with its own organized summer camp and outings, as well as lectures and a Red Cross home makers' class for mothers.

The Emanu El Sisterhood House of San Francisco, Cal., offers educational and recreational facilities as a neighborhood center, and provides residence to Jewish girls in need of homes. Its headworker co-operates with the Americanization activities of the Council of Jewish Women. There is also in San Francisco the San Bruno Settlement House which is a neighborhood center for a comparatively large population of Jews.

Among other Jewish centers in which Americanization, including classes in English and citizenship, is promoted are the Irene Kaufman Settlement of Pittsburgh, which recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary; the Jewish Sisterhood of Newark, N. J.; the Jewish Educational Alliance of Columbus, Ohio; the Jewish Educational League of Toledo, Ohio; the Jewish Educational Alliance of Baltimore, Md.; the Jewish Institute of Kansas City; the Abraham Lincoln Settlement of Milwaukee, Wis.; the Jewish Settlement of St. Joseph, Mo., the Jewish Educational Alliance of Atlanta, Ga.; and the Neighborhood House of Portland, Ore.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSOCIATIONS

The Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association usually appeal to a group of older young men and women than the settlements, and reach a larger proportion of the more Americanized elements. Their function is to provide wholesome social, recreational, educational, and cultural opportunities in an American milieu. Some of them include in their programs 'formal classes in "English to foreigners." A large number of these organizations are affiliated with the Council of Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Associations, which assists in the formulation of plans and programs. The total number of affiliated organizations is 342, of which 156 are Y. M. H. A.'s, 132 Y. W. H. A.'s, 17 Y. M. & Y. W. H. A.'s, and 37 community centers and communal organizations.

In connection with the oldest and largest Young Men's Hebrew Association of New York City the following, from an address of its president, Hon. Irving Lehman,<sup>8</sup> is indicative of Americanizing principles for which such an association stands: "All of these young men are sound Americans, eager to take part in civic affairs, and we try not so much to teach them as to give them an opportunity to learn for themselves the true meaning of democracy and of ordered liberty and especially the obligation of each citizen to bring to the service of our country the best that is in him and that, as Jews, they have received a precious heritage, a source of strength, that they must conserve for themselves and for their country."

The Young Women's Hebrew Association of New York City, the leading Jewish women's organization of its type throughout the country, houses a large number of working girls. The Association's work is similar to that of the men's associations, and includes lectures and classes relating to citizenship.

Among the inter-state and state federations of Young Men's Hebrew Associations, the New England Federation has more especially recognized the need of promoting naturalization and citizenship work.

THE JEWISH WELFARE BOARD

The Council of Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Associations, organized as a national federating force, has become amalgamated with the Jewish Welfare Board, which now combines the function of promoting soldier and sailor welfare work with the community work of Jewish centers in various cities throughout the country.

The Jewish Welfare Board stood shoulder to shoulder with the several organizations that assisted in the maintenance of the morale of the American soldier and sailor during the war. A number of national Jewish organizations affiliated with the Board in the promotion of its work. The Jewish Welfare Board aided the Jews and their fellow Americans in the army, in the navy and in the air service. Wherever specifically Jewish needs were to be met, the Board supplied them in religious, personal and community service. Wherever social, educational, and recreational needs were required, the Board assisted in furnishing them, irrespective of creed or nationality. The Board organized classes in English, inaugurated lectures in American history, civics, and social conditions, arranged for participation in patriotic celebrations, and aided men in the service in naturalization and citizenship. It shared, with the American Red Cross, the War Camp Community Service, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Catholic War Council, the Salvation Army, and the American Library Association, together with the government's own educational, recreation and morale service, the responsibilities of providing welfare work for soldier and sailor. It is a sectarian agency recognized by the government as a means of promoting the efficiency of Americans of Jewish affiliation and of performing social service for the families of Jewish men who have been disabled or have fallen. It exemplifies Jewish service as a socializing and Americanizing influence.

THE COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

Of all the nation-wide Jewish organizations, the Council of Jewish Women has the most ramified activities along Americanization lines. The Council begins its activities in behalf of immigrants from the very moment of their landing on these shores. It has established a Department of Immigrant Aid, and through its representatives at the ports of entry, especially at Ellis Island, and through its field workers at the headquarters in New York City, the Department assists the Jewish immigrant girl to establish contact with the community in which she is to live.

The Council has 165 branches or sections in various parts of the country, and in Canada and Cuba. In each section there is an immigrant aid and Americanization committee whose functions include the organization of classes in English and civics. Over one hundred such classes, stimulated by the Council, were conducted during the past year. They were established at social centers and public schools, with the co-operation of private organizations and public educational authorities. Altogether over two thousand women in at least twenty-five cities were induced during the year to join "English to foreigners" classes. The Council has furthered the system of home teaching for mothers whose duties prevent them from attending school.

Through its several sections the Council is promoting the process of adjusting immigrant Jewish women and girls to the American environment. In New York City, the Council Home is maintained by the New York Section as a social center. Its Americanization activities include "English to foreigners" classes and an immigrant girls' club. The section's secretary for immigrant aid and the field workers have their headquarters in New York City, and promote the work of naturalization, employment, and social adjustment. The Young Women's Hebrew Association of New Orleans is supported by the Council of that city. The Neighborhood House of Portland, Ore., is under the auspices of the Council. In San Francisco the Council has established a "Council Flat" where classes for mothers have been organized and where the resident teacher co-operates with neighborhood schools. In Los Angeles a home teacher has been appointed to teach alien mothers in their homes. In Nashville the Council took the lead in the organization of an Americanization Council in which are represented the various associations of the city. The Cincinnati organization, in co-operation with other agencies of that city, made a survey of Americanization activities. The Albany section is a member of the Americanization Council of that city.

The Council has also organized a notable piece of work in connection with Jewish women on farms. Classes and lectures in English, as well as in home care, home economics, hygiene, and sanitation have been arranged in the states of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Rhode Island for the benefit of Jewish women in the rural districts.

THE HEBREW SHELTERING AND IMMIGRANT AID SOCIETY

Complementary to the work of the Council of Jewish Women is that of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, which provides more particularly for men and their families. The report for 1919 says: "One of the objects for which the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society was founded is to facilitate the Americanization of Jewish immigrants." The Society has assisted thousands of families in adapting themselves to their new environment. It meets immigrants on their arrival at the port, provides shelter and social aid for the homeless and friendless; it helps them to settle in their homes; it aids them in securing naturalization papers; it recruits them for its citizenship classes, maintained at its own headquarters in New York City and at other institutions in various cities; it provides lectures on American history and civics, celebration of legal holidays, and the holding of Americanization meetings. It maintains branches in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, and Seattle. The 1920 report of the Boston Branch states: "We furnish, through the press and speakers, information on the industrial, agricultural, and commercial status of the New England states; we encourage newcomers to take advantage of all educational facilities and social activities which tend to promote their Americanization; we foster American ideals among the newcomers and instill in them, through a knowledge of American history and institutions, a true patriotism and love for their adopted country."

TRADE AND AGRICULTURAL INSTITUTIONS

Prominent among the influences which have been potent in the Americanization of Jewish immigrants coming to this country from Russia, Roumania, and Austria-Hungary is the Baron de Hirsch Fund, which was established thirty years ago. At the outset of its career it fostered various local enterprises for the education of Jewish immigrants. It still subsidizes a few local organizations, but has gradually withdrawn from this field as organizations have gained sufficient strength to maintain themselves. The main activity of the fund has been the Americanization of the Jewish colonist or farmer. In this connection mention should be made of its establishment of the Baron de Hirsch Agricultural School, formerly located at Woodbine, N. J., and now in process of establishment at Peekskill, N. Y. The education of immigrants has always been part of the program of the Baron de Hirsch Fund and its activities have made an impress upon thousands of immigrants. It fostered the Woodbine Colony, which is said to exemplify "the characteristically American qualities of self-reliance, self-help, and initiative," and, through the medium of its own neighborhood life, to have been "brought into essential union with the life of America."<sup>9</sup>

The Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society, organized in 1900, says in its report for 1920: "If Americanization is conceived to be broad enough to embrace all activities tending to elevate the standards of living, then the work of our Society in all its manifold phases is Americanization of the highest type."

Likewise, the National Farm School, at Doylestown, Pa. has, for nearly a quarter of a century, been active in the training and education of Jewish young men as scientific farmers and directors of agriculture, and has exerted a real Americanizing influence on the life of the Jewish community.

Reference should be made here to several local organizations in New York City which have been influential in trade, technical, and vocational education, and which have also exerted a socializing influence. These are: The Baron de Hirsch Trade School, maintained by the Baron de Hirsch Fund; the Clara de Hirsch Home for Working Girls; the Hebrew Technical Institute; the Hebrew Technical School for Girls.

OTHER NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Various other national organizations have been helpful in the work of Americanization. The Jewish Publication Society of America does the vital service of disseminating, through the medium of the English language, a knowledge of Jewish history, philosophy and literature. The American Jewish Historical Society, as its name indicates, promotes research with regard to Jews and their relation to American history and world historical events. The importance of the work of this society has won ready recognition on the part of Jews of America.

Throughout the country are to be found lodges of the Jewish fraternal orders, where the less Americanized and the more Americanized join hands in fellowship and mutual understanding. The lodge has been a medium through which immigrants have adapted themselves to the ways of this country; they have adopted its parliamentary usage and its methods of expression and decision; they have imbibed much of the spirit of America in the meetings of their organizations. As the younger immigrant or the son of the immigrant makes the club the place of his activities, so does the older immigrant use the lodge of his fraternal order. In an annual message to the convention of the Order Brith Abraham, Mr. Samuel Dorf, the Grand Master, says: "Our order has not been lacking in the work of Americanization of the foreign born who came within its fold. Our lodges have instilled in the minds and hearts of those who entered their portals the lessons of love of America, devotion to the stars and stripes, brotherly love of their fellowmen and patriotic duty to country." Notable Americanization work was accomplished by the Independent Order Free Sons of Israel during the war.

It organized a club house in New York City as a unit of the War Camp Community Service, provided for hospitals and camps, arranged concerts, Americanization meetings, and other functions of patriotic character, and made itself useful to men in service in numerous ways. The Independent Order of B'nai B'rith has established institutions and agencies of social service for the orphaned, the aged, the indigent, and has assisted in the promotion of "big brother" work among Jews. Its distinctively Americanization work has been the giving of lectures and the conducting of educational meetings in its several districts and among individual lodges throughout the country.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS

Other significant factors in Americanizing influences are the labor organizations. The most conspicuous is the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which has a very considerable membership of Jews. It has established an Educational Department, which provides for the educational and cultural welfare of its members. It conducts a Worker's University, and has secured the co-operation of the public educational authorities of New York City, Newark, N. J., Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Boston in the establishment of classes in English. The school buildings employed by the International are called Unity Centers. In New York City there are eight of these. A large place in the curriculum of these centers is devoted to the study of the English language; there are classes in English, of elementary, intermediate, advanced, and high school grades. The teachers are assigned by the evening school department of the Board of Education. At each Unity Center there is a recreation worker assigned by the Department of Community and Recreation Centers. The Union's Educational Department assembles all the members of a center to attend lectures on health and on economics, the organization providing the lecturers. In some of the cities these lectures are given at meeting-places of the Unions. The organization also provides its members with lectures on cultural subjects, and encourages their contact with educational and cultural movements by supplying reasonable means of access to concerts and theatres, and provisions for securing publications.

This movement, together with that of the United Labor Education Committee of New York, and similar movements in several other cities, is expressive of activities on the part of workers to stimulate their members toward cultural, educational, social, and civic knowledge, and is recognized as a helpful influence in the process of Americanization.

THE YIDDISH PRESS

It is no exaggeration to say that there are fully a million Jews in the United States who read exclusively the Yiddish press, and depend on it for information and enlightenment. The greater proportion of these do so under strict necessity because of insufficient familiarity with the English language. There are, however, thousands of fully Americanized Jews who prefer the Yiddish press to the English, or who read a Yiddish newspaper in addition to an English one, because it keeps them fully informed on Jewish affairs both in this country and abroad, and serves as a link binding them to their scattered brethren. The constant springing up of new Yiddish newspapers, trade journals, and literary reviews shows that there exists a sustained interest in the Yiddish press in this country.

It will be clear to the intelligent observer that the Yiddish press has fully realized its duty of inculcating in the heart of the Jewish immigrant a love for his new home, respect and reverence for its traditions and ideals, and ready obedience to its laws. It has constantly been urging the Jewish immigrant to study English, and has placed many facilities in his way. At the present moment several Yiddish papers are teaching English through their columns by a system of parallel readings in the two languages, under the direction of the well-known Jewish lexicographer, Dr. Alexander Harkavy. At various times the newspapers have carried on front-page campaigns, urging the Jewish immigrant to become a naturalized citizen, and have opened special naturalization bureaus to give the immigrant advice and information.

The Yiddish press is constantly striving to keep its readers informed of the passage of new laws and of the methods of government in general, maintaining special correspondents in Washington for this very purpose. One Yiddish newspaper has published a series of authoritative articles on civics, giving a lucid and at the same time accurate description of the various departments of the United States government. These articles were later reprinted in book form, and were sold at a very low cost to thousands of Jews. During the recent military draft every Yiddish newspaper in the United States opened a special bureau in charge of a legal authority to give the Jews of the district free assistance in the filling out of questionnaires, etc. Every Yiddish newspaper has on its staff a writer who is constantly occupied with answering queries with regard to the income tax, the new immigration ruling, etc. On the occasion of American holidays and historical celebrations, the Yiddish newspapers print editorials and articles explaining in a popular style the significance of the event.

Without further enumeration of the various Americanization activities of the Yiddish press, it will be clear that it has been a potent force for good and has greatly aided the Jewish immigrant in adapting himself to his new environment and has endeavored to make of him a desirable citizen in his new land. The record of the Yiddish press in this respect is a strong argument against the theory that in order to become a good American citizen the immigrant must abandon his native tongue and customs.

CONCLUSION

We have presented essential ideals of Americanization to which the Jewish immigrant conforms. We have detailed activities affecting Jewish immigrants and their children by virtue of which they have been assisted in the process of being molded into the American nation.

We have seen that the Jew in this country brings and maintains ideals which make him a valuable element in the formation of the American nation. The Jew has organized educational, social, cultural, and religious activities which have been in accord with the best American traditions. Young Men's Hebrew Associations and Young Women's Hebrew Associations, social centers, settlements, and sisterhoods, technical, trade, and agricultural schools, organizations for the care, maintenance, and education of immigrants, agencies for their social advance, have been established with a view to the progress of the Jew in making himself a worthy part of the American people. Jewish philanthropic organizations, as well as associations inaugurated by the beneficiaries themselves, such as the labor unions, have all had as an underlying basis the adaptation to American conditions. The organized efforts of Jews, by Jews, and for Jews have been a real force in Americanization and socialization. Their scope, breadth, and intensity have made their activities an important contribution to the elements of Americanization; they stand out as dominant factors assisting Jews to become members of the American community; they are a significant part of the social, cultural, and educational fabric of the American nation.

GERMANY

1. GENERAL EVENTS OF INTEREST TO JEWS

JUNE 4. Bavarian authorities decide to expel all east-European Jews, and many large centres are already taking steps in that direction. Deputations of prominent Jews make representations to the national and Bavarian governments.—Berlin: German People's Party (the Deutsche Völkische Schutz und Trutzbund) adopts following program of anti-Jewish activity: To expel the Jews from Germany and to confiscate their property, to close their schools, to disfranchise them, to nationalize all the Jewish industrial and financial establishments, to compel them to do manual labor, to punish Germans who work for Jews.—Berlin: Order for compulsory registration within forty-eight hours of all aliens above age of sixteen years promulgated.—Munich: At request of Jewish community, Bavarian government suspends number of anti-Jewish periodicals for their pogrom agitation.—14. Jena: Students of the University petition the government to restrict the number of Jewish students in the medical college.—24. Berlin: Chancellor Fehrenbach, speaking of the new government's program, declares that it will do all in its power to fight anti-Semitism.—Berlin: Executive Committee of the German Zionists publishes statement in press in which evidence is produced to prove that "The Protocols of the Elders of Zion" is a forgery.—Munich: Bavarian government decides not to deport Jews who were former residents of Austria.

JULY 13. Karlsruhe: Students at university strike when Minister of Education appoints Professor Aschkenazi to chair.—Hanover: By vote of 1255 to 606 the German students of a local polytechnical institute vote to expel all the Jews from the general student organization. Senate of the institution informs students it could not recognize its executive unless it were elected by the whole student body.—Baden: At meeting of parliament all parties, with exception of the German Nationalists, condemn conduct of students in regard to appointment of Jewish professors at technical high school at Karlsruhe.—25. London Daily Telegraph states that Jews are being seriously molested at the more popular summer resorts in Germany.

AUGUST 2. Königsberg and Jena: Students demand that Jews be admitted to the Universities only in percentage to the population and that the Eastern Jews be totally excluded. Rector of Königsberg University refuses to accede to the demand on ground that suggested restriction is unconstitutional.—Ministry of Baden forbids Arnold Ruge, professor in philosophy, to hold further lectures at the University of Heidelberg, because of his anti-Semitic utterances.—Berlin: German National Students evince antagonism towards Professor Nicolai, a Jew charging him with lack of patriotism. Decision of rector of the University, that he discontinue his lectures, set aside by Minister of Public Worship who says that the accusations are groundless.—9. Borun: Organization formed for purpose of forcing the local authorities to exclude all Jews.—Berlin: Minister of Interior, Mr. Severing, in reply to interpellations in the Diet, demanding the expulsion or internment of eastern Jews, stated that certain measures had been adopted by him to prevent an influx of eastern Jews into Germany, but he believed that the danger of eastern Jews was exaggerated, and he characterized internment camps as a futile cruelty.—20. # JEWISH NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

[NOTE.—* indicates that information is not official]

In the following list information is given respecting those Jewish organizations which have a national scope as distinguished from societies of a local character which are listed in the Directory of Local Jewish Organizations, volume 22, pp. 322-339, and in the Supplementary Directory in this volume, p. 247. Eighty-nine bodies are listed below. During the past year the Council of Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Associations was merged with the Jewish Welfare Board. The Alliance Israélite Universelle and the American Jewish Congress are omitted from this year's list. The former being a foreign organization, though it has branches in this country, it was not considered proper to list it. The American Jewish Congress adjourned sine die on May 31, 1920. Eight new bodies appear this year: The American Academy for Jewish Research, the Jewish Valor Legion, the Mizrahi Hatzoir, and the following fraternities: Alpha Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Sigma, Phi Sigma Delta, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Upsilon Lambda Phi.

No material change has occurred in the statistics of these organizations as given in volume 22. The classification used there is repeated below: the Landsmannschaften comprise organizations of natives of various sections of Europe; the miscellaneous group comprises the Jewish Sabbath Alliance of America, the Hebrew Veterans of the Wars of the Republic, and the Jewish Valor Legion. The Zionist organizations have been grouped separately. In the educational class are the Intercollegiate Menorah Association, the Jewish Chautauqua Society, and others of a similar character. The three Theological Seminaries and the Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning are given separately. As research institutions are classed the American Jewish Historical Society, the Bureau of Jewish Social Research, the Jewish Academicians of America, and the American Academy for Jewish Research. Professional associations include the various rabbinical societies and the National Conference of Jewish Social Service. The Religious Unions include the congregational federations and their national auxiliaries.

The following table shows the number of organizations in each class, the number of branches and of members:

Character of Organization	Total number	Number reporting branches	Number of branches	Number reporting members	Number of members
Fraternal Orders and Mutual Benefit Associations.	14	10	2304	13	508,255
Philanthropic Organizations..	16	7	948	7	308,145
Zionist Organizations.....	9	5	1345	6	237,828*

Research Institutions.....	4	..	....	2	455
Miscellaneous.....	3	..	....	3	5,988
Total .....	89	36	5590	58	1,126,977

* This includes the membership of the Zionist Organization of America as given in the last Year Book. Membership for this year was not available.

Several interesting facts are apparent in the foregoing table. Over a million of the Jews of the United States are connected with National Organizations; over half a million are affiliated with fraternal orders or mutual benefit associations; a quarter of a million help to maintain philanthropic enterprises of a national scope; thirty-six of the organizations report a total of 5590 branches, affiliated bodies, or agencies. The number of these must be taken into account when we consider the number of local organizations.

JEWISH PERIODICALS APPEARING IN THE UNITED STATES

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

The following is a list of Jewish periodicals which were being published in the United States up to the time of printing. Owing to exigencies of publication, it was found impossible to include this year the list of Organs of Associations and Trade Journals, which is on file. A tabulation of the latter, based on revised information, is given below.

Of the list of General Newspapers and Magazines given in Volume 22, seven suspended publication during the past year. Of these, two were monthlies published in Hebrew, one monthly in English, one quarterly in English, two local weeklies in English, and one in Yiddish. Eleven new names appear in the following list: two dailies in Yiddish (Die Zeit of New York City and the Jewish Times of Los Angeles), four local weeklies in English, two in Yiddish, one weekly in Yiddish and English, one semi-monthly in English and Yiddish, and one quarterly in Yiddish. The last, Schriften, established in 1919, was omitted from last year's list. It is a journal devoted to modern Yiddish literature and art.

Of the twelve daily newspapers listed, five are published in New York City, three in Chicago, and one each in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Milwaukee, and Los Angeles. The eighty-two periodicals here listed are published in thirty-two cities. Twenty-five appear in New York; eight in Chicago; five in Cincinnati; three each in Cleveland, Philadelphia, St. Louis, and San Francisco; two each in Baltimore, Boston, Fort Worth, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Omaha, and Pittsburgh; and one each in the following cities: Buffalo, Denver, Detroit, Hartford, Houston, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Memphis, Minneapolis, Newark, New Orleans, Paterson, Portland (Ore.), Providence, Schenectady, Seattle, Toledo, and Worcester.

Twenty-four of these periodicals were established within the past five years. Sixteen have been appearing for from six to ten years. Thirteen have been appearing for from eleven to fifteen years; six for from sixteen to twenty years; nine for from twenty-one to thirty years; fourteen for more than thirty years. The American Israelite, established in 1854, is the oldest Jewish periodical, being now in its sixty-seventh year. This weekly and The Jewish Times, of San Francisco, and the American Hebrew, of New York City, are over half a century old.

The following tables give the languages in which the periodicals of each group are published and the frequency with which they appear:

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The statistics of Jewish population given below are based largely upon estimates made before the World War. The population figures for the countries which have not been affected by the shifting boundaries as a result of the war are repeated as given in the previous issue of the Year Book, except in the case of Denmark, Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland, and Egypt. As to the newly established states, and the countries whose geographical boundaries were fixed by the terms of the Treaties of Versailles, St. Germain-en-Laye, and Neuilly, and for which no revised official population figures were available, estimates of the general and Jewish population were made on the basis of the population data for the political subdivisions constituting the respective countries as they existed before the war. Special attention is called to the new figures for the Jewish population of Poland based on the official estimate made for the Polish Government at th time of the Riga Peace Conference.

All new political subdivisions which have been generally recognized as independent states have been listed as such. For the sake of convenience, the various parts of European Russia which claim independence are also listed separately under the general heading "Russia in Europe."

In the case of those countries where the boundaries are still contested, and which have special plebiscite areas, the most reliable estimates were obtained, the sources for each being indicated in the appended notes.

It was not possible to make allowance for loss of life due to war conditions, but in the absence of any authoritative figures, we are proceeding on the assumption that these losses were counterbalanced by the natural increase of population and by the temporary cessation of emigration.

* Year refers to Jewish population.

<sup>1</sup> CANADA.—This is the figure given in the Canadian census of 1911. Since that time the Jewish immigration to Canada has aggregated 27,301. Assuming that the natural increase was two per cent per annum, and that there was not any considerable emigration from Canada, there should now be approximately 120,000 Jews in British North America. Canada is taking a new census, including a religious enumeration, in June, 1921.

<sup>2</sup> AUSTRIA.—The Republic of Austria, as at present constituted, consists of Lower and Upper Austria, Salzburg, Carinthia (including the southern plebiscite area), Styria, Northern Tyrol, and Vorarlberg. According to the official Austrian Census of 1910 (the 1920 Austrian census takes no account of religion), these provinces had a Jewish population of about 190,000. Immigration from the eastern sections of the former empire has increased this number to at least 200,000.

<sup>3</sup> BULGARIA.—The frequent changes in the boundaries of Bulgaria make it difficult to determine with any degree of accuracy the general and the Jewish population. By the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly, the present boundaries of Bulgaria approach again those of 1910, when the official Bulgarian Census gave the Jewish population as 40,070. The present Jewish population of Bulgaria is estimated by D. J. Florentin (Ha-Olam, London, November 21, 1919) to be about 45,000.

<sup>4</sup> CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.—The Czecho-Slovak republic comprises the territory of the former Austrian provinces of Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, as well as Slovakia and Ruthenia, which were formerly parts of Hungary.

According to the official statistics of the last census, which took place in 1910 both in Austria and Hungary, the number of Jews in these provinces was as follows:

Bohemia .....	85,827
Moravia .....	41,183
Silesia .....	13,442
Slovakia .....	143,545
	283,997

To this must be added the Jews of Ruthenia, estimated by the Czecho-Slovak Jewish National Council to be at least 65,000, giving a total of 348,997 Jews in the whole of the republic, out of a total population of 14,000,000.

<sup>5</sup> FINLAND.—This estimate was made by Nahum Sokolow (Zionist Bulletin, London, February 25, 1920).

<sup>6</sup> FRANCE.—The estimate of the Jewish population of France in 1911 is 100,000. The return of Alsace-Lorraine adds a population of 30,483 (German Census 1910), thus making the total Jewish population of France for 1911 about 130,000. During the past decade the Jewish population has increased by immigration from Eastern Europe and the Balkans, especially Salonica, and is now estimated by Davis Trietsch at about 150,000. (Jewish Chronicle, December 12, 1919.)

<sup>7</sup> GERMANY.—The German Census of 1910 gives the Jewish population of Germany as 615,021. By the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, Germany through cession and by plebiscite loses the following territories:

	Jewish population (Census 1910)
Silesia (regency of Opole).....	18,217
Posen .....	26,512
West Prussia .....	13,954
East Prussia (Allenstein).....	2,587
Alsace-Lorraine .....	30,483
Schleswig .....	20,000 (estimated)
	<hr/>
Total .....	111,753

This leaves for the republic of Germany as at present constituted a Jewish population of 503,268.

* GREECE.—According to the Greek Provisional Census of 1913, the kingdom of Greece (including Crete) and the territories of Macedonia, Epirus, and the Ægean Islands, acquired as a result of war with Turkey and Bulgaria in 1912-1913, had a Jewish population of 88,787. By the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly and the provisional terms submitted by the Supreme Council to Turkey, Greece will probably come into possession of the whole of Thrace, Northern Epirus, the entire Ægean littoral, and will establish her mandatory over Smyrna. The latter territories have a Jewish population of about 30,000. The total Jewish population of Greater Greece would thus be about 120,000. A correspondent from Salonika, writing in the Jewish Chronicle of December 31, 1920, estimates the Jewish population of Greece at 300,000.

* HUNGARY.—The Austro-Hungarian Census of 1910 gives the Jewish population of Hungary proper as 907,610. By the terms of the Peace Treaty, Hungary cedes the following territories to her neighbors:

	Jewish population
Transylvania (ceded to Roumania).....	240,000
Banat of Temesvar (ceded to Roumania).....	50,000
Slovakia (ceded to Czecho-Slovakia).....	143,545
	<hr/> 433,545

Hungary as at present constituted is thus left with a Jewish population of about 475,000. Davis Trietsch's estimate is 450,000. (Jewish Chronicle, London, December 12, 1919.) According to the census recently held in Hungary, there are in Budapest 212,000 Jews or 22.9 per cent of the whole population of 925,000.

<sup>11</sup> POLAND.—These figures are based on the statistics of Prof. Romer, collected in 1920 for the Russo-Polish Peace Conference at Riga. They include the Jewish population of the territories ceded to Poland by the Riga Treaty.

<sup>12</sup> ROUMANIA.—Roumania at present has possession of Russian Bessarabia, the Dobrudja, ceded to her by Bulgaria, the Austrian province of Bukowina, Transylvania, and the Banat of Temesvar. The distribution of the Jewish population in these territories is as follows:

	Jewish population
Kingdom of Roumania (as constituted in 1914) ..	241,000
Bessarabia .....	300,000
Transylvania .....	240,000
Banat of Temesvar.....	50,000
Bukowina .....	103,000
	<hr/> 934,000

The figures for Transylvania, the Banat of Temesvar, and Bukovina are based on the Austrian and Hungarian Census of 1910. The estimate for Bessarabia was made by Dr. Jacob Bernstein-Cohn (Jewish Chronicle, London, March 5, 1920.)

Dr. Diamant (Ha'Olam, London, January 23, 1919) estimates the Jewish population of Roumania in 1919 to be about 1,000,000. This agrees with the official estimate reported by the American Legation at Bucharest.

<sup>13</sup> SOVIET RUSSIA.—This includes the Caucasus which in 1913 had a Jewish population of 78,831.

<sup>14</sup> ESTHONIA.—This estimate was made by Dr. Klampas, member of the Jewish National Council of Esthonia. (Zionist Bulletin, London, February 25, 1920.)

<sup>15</sup> LATVIA.—Includes all of Courland, four southern districts of Livonia and Letgalen (the three north-western districts of Vitebsk). The figure for the Jewish population given (150,000) is based on the Russian Census of 1897, the only official source available.

<sup>16</sup> LITHUANIA.—The territory included in Lithuania at present consists of the province of Kovno, part of Suvalki, and portions of White Russia not held by Poland. Recent official information from the Ministry of Jewish Affairs of Lithuania gives the Jewish population of that country as 144,527. This does not include the numerous refugees about to be repatriated which the Ministry estimates to be about 100,000. The Jewish population may, therefore, be fixed at about 250,000.

<sup>18</sup> SERB-CROAT-SLOVENE STATE (JUGO-SLAVIA).—The kingdom of the Serbs, Slovenes, and Croats is composed of part of Albania, the greater part of the former Serbia, and the following parts of the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy, viz.: Croatia and Slavonia, part of Styria, part of Dalmatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina. Within these provinces there was in 1913 a Jewish population of about 100,000, which estimate is based upon the official Austro-Hungarian Census of 1910 and the Serbian Census of 1913. The estimate of Davis Trietsch (Jewish Chronicle, London, December 12, 1919) is about 200,000.

<sup>19</sup> SWEDEN.—According to the census of 1911, the general population of Sweden was 5,522,403, and the Jewish population 6,112. The census of 1919 gave the general population as 5,813,850, with no figures for the Jewish population. Assuming that the rate of increase of the general population applies also to the Jewish population, it may be estimated that there were about 6,400 Jews in Sweden in 1919. In the previous issues of the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK, since volume 15 (1913-1914), the Jewish population of Sweden was erroneously given as 3,912.

<sup>20</sup> SWITZERLAND.—These figures are from the census taken in Switzerland in December, 1920. The Jewish population of the leading cities is as follows: Zurich, 7,000; Geneva, 2,772; Basle, 2,600; and Berne, 2,057.

<sup>21</sup> PALESTINE.—No revised population figures for the whole of Palestine are at present available. Dr. A. Ruppin has stated that the Jewish population of Palestine has not increased during the war period. A census taken, by the Jaffe-Palestine Office in 1916-1917, of one section of the country, Judea, gave the Jewish population of this particular section as 41,704, of whom 26,605 were residents of Jerusalem. The Jewish population of the Holy City in 1913 numbered 58,390. Lord Sydenham in a statement made in Parliament on June 29, 1920, gave these figures for Palestine: Muslims 515,000, Christians 62,500, Jews 65,300, others 5,050; the Jews number about 10 per cent.

<sup>22</sup> RUSSIA IN ASIA.—The distribution of the Jewish population in Asiatic Russia in 1913 was:

Siberia .....	58,730
Central Asia .....	17,532
Total .....	76,262

Since 1913 the Jewish population in these regions was considerably increased by immigration from the former "Pale of Settlement."

<sup>23</sup> EGYPT.—These figures are based on the census taken in 1920, abstracts of which are given in the Jewish Guardian of March 4, 1921. The Jewish population of the chief cities is as follows: Cairo, 29,207; Alexandria, 24,858.

B. JEWISH POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES

The Government of the United States, in making its various censuses, takes no account of religious affiliations. There are, therefore, no official, authoritative statistics of the Jewish population of the United States. All figures concerning the number of Jews in this country are based entirely upon estimates. Following is a table giving the number of Jews in the United States as estimated by various authorities at different times.

TABLE IV

1914	Bureau of Jewish Statistics and Research .....	2,933,874
1918	Bureau of Jewish Statistics and Research .....	3,300,000

The latest estimate, that for 1918, was made by the Bureau of Jewish Statistics and Research of the American Jewish Committee, under the direction of Doctor Samson D. Oppenheim. A complete statement of the methods of computation which resulted in the figures presented is contained in the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK 5679, pp. 31-74.

The last previous estimate, that made by the editor of the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK in 1910, was based on the increase in the population of fifty cities during the years 1907-1910. For these fifty cities, the total population in 1910, as estimated by the Industrial Removal Office, was 15 per cent greater than that estimated by the editor of the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK 5668. It was assumed that there had been a similar increase in the Jewish population throughout the country, and that the total Jewish population for 1907, given as 1,777,185, had by 1910 become 2,043,762.

The estimate made in 1907 by the editor of the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK 5668 was obtained by securing from individuals in almost every Jewish community an estimate of the Jewish population of the place. These were added together and gave, as a basis for calculation, the figure 1,777,185. Table V gives the Jewish population, by states, as estimated at that time, and eleven years later by the Bureau of Jewish Statistics. It will be noted that, assuming these estimates to have been valid, the Jewish population of the United States has practically doubled within eleven years. The explanation of this extraordinary increase lies chiefly in the movement of Jews from abroad, the total number of Jewish immigrants during the period being 863,526.

Table VI, arranged according to geographical sections, will facilitate comparison with population tables given by the United States Census Bureau as the official estimates for 1918.

In the article on the Jewish Population of the United States, in AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK 5679, attention was called to the interesting fact that nine-tenths of all Jews in the country live in the following twelve states of the union: New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio, New Jersey, Missouri, Connecticut, California, Maryland, Michigan, and Indiana (see Table VII). It will be noted that seventy-five per cent of the total are residents of the five states ranking first in manufactures, according to the United States census of 1910, namely, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts, and Ohio.

Another point of interest developed by the inquiry of the Bureau of Jewish Statistics and Research is that approximately three-quarters of the Jewish population of the United States are concentrated in only ten cities which hold only about 14 per cent of the total general population of the United States. This brings out graphically the industrial and commercial tendencies of the Jewish population of the United States.

In the following table of cities in which there are more than 1000 Jewish inhabitants, the total general population for 1917, as estimated by the Census Bureau, is also given, in order to facilitate comparison.

The Bureau of Jewish Social Research is at present engaged on a statistical survey of the Jewish population of the principal cities of the United States, based on the Jewish death rate and Jewish attendance in the elementary schools. It is hoped that it will be possible to include the results of this survey in the next issue of the YEAR BOOK.

Approximately a half of the Jews in the United States reside in the city of New York, where they constitute about twenty-five per cent of the total population. The following table of the Jewish population of New York City, by boroughs, as estimated from figures of public school attendance by Doctor Alexander Dushkin, is taken from the Jewish Communal Register, published by the New York Kehillah, in 1918.

TABLE X

The Bronx .....	211,000
Brooklyn .....	568,000
Queens .....	23,000
Richmond .....	5,000

Total .....1,503,000

It is interesting to note that, while New York contains such a large quota of the Jews of the United States, it is not proportionately the most Jewish city. Chelsea, Mass., has a Jewish population of 13,000, or twenty-eight per cent of the general population. The three Jewish agricultural colonies which make up the bulk of the populations of Rosenhayn, Carmel, and Woodbine, all in New Jersey, constitute, respectively, fifty per cent, sixty per cent, and one hundred per cent of the general population of those places.

C. JEWISH IMMIGRATION INTO THE UNITED STATES

The following tables give the main figures relating to the Jewish immigration into the United States from the year 1881 to June 30, 1919. For the earlier years, from 1881 to 1900, the results are only for the ports of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore; from 1899 onwards, the figures are from the reports of the Commissioner-General of Immigration. In some instances the figures refer only to the year 1917-1918, continuing those of previous issues of the YEAR BOOK.

The complete statistics of immigration to the United States, as shown by the Commissioner-General's reports, are given below for the period 1899-1920. It will be seen that for this period of twenty-two years Jewish immigration has been 1,565,607, amounting to 10.24 per cent of the total immigration.

Since 1908 the number of aliens leaving the United States is given as well as the number admitted. It will be observed that for the thirteen years the total number of Jews returning is approximately 7 per cent of the Jews admitted. This figure contrasts strikingly with the total number of departures, which is over 34 per cent.

The Jewish immigration since 1881 is approximately 2,150,000. On the basis of the percentage emigrating from the United States since 1908, the total number who departed during this period would be 149,000, leaving a net increase through immigration of 2,001,000.

Of interest in connection with the number of immigrants admitted are the data for those rejected on application for admission and those deported from the United States after admission. The figures are shown in the table below.

During a period of twenty-two years, the number of Jews rejected on application for landing was 21,221, or approximately 7.21 per cent of the total number of immigrants debarred. This is considerably less than the proportion which Jews form of the total immigration for the same period, which is 10.24 per cent.

For the same period the number of Jews deported after landing was 2,563, or 6.54 per cent of the total number deported. This, again, is lower than the proportion of Jews in the total immigration.

IMMIGRATION 1919-1920

Statistics for the year ending June 30, 1921, are not yet available. The significant facts respecting the immigration of the previous year are given herewith.

During 1919-1920 there were admitted 14,292 Jews. The number departing was 358. The net increase through immigration was thus 13,934. The net increase for 1918-1919 was 2682. The figures for 1919-1920 as also those for the three previous years betray the influence of the European war, and the unsettled conditions following it, on Jewish as on general immigration.

The larger percentage of women and children among Jewish immigrants is indicative of the permanent and family character of this immigration, an aspect which is further emphasized by the low percentage of Jewish immigrants departing from the United States.

D. JEWISH IMMIGRATION INTO CANADA

For a period of twenty years, beginning July 1, 1900, the Jewish immigration into Canada was 76,114. The immigration during the past fiscal year, ending March 31, 1920, was 116.

Below are shown the yearly figures. It will be observed that during this period the Jewish immigration has amounted to approximately nine per cent of the immigration from all countries exclusive of the United States and the United Kingdom, but less than 3 per cent of the total immigration.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING

ANTI-JEWISH PROPAGANDA

The afternoon session was devoted to a discussion of the anti-Jewish propaganda referred to in the report of the Executive Committee (see p. 313). The President of the Committee presented the draft of a memorial to the American people in which the so-called "Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion," now being circulated by various agencies, are declared a forgery, and the charge that Bolshevism is part of a conspiracy of Jews and Freemasons to secure world domination is denounced as a malicious invention inspired by foreign reactionary forces for the purpose of breeding suspicion and hatred against sections of our citizenry in order to discredit "free government in the eyes of the European masses and thus facilitate the restoration of absolutism in government."

Discussion as to methods of combating the propaganda was had and was participated in by representatives of national organizations who had offered their co-operation to the Committee.

A motion was made and unanimously carried that the memorial prepared by the President be adopted and made public with the signatures of such national Jewish organizations as the Executive Committee may deem it advisable to invite.*

* The memorial was made public on December 1, 1920. It is reprinted on pp. 367-377 of this volume.

VOTE OF THANKS TO PRESIDENT

At the conclusion of the meeting, upon motion, a rising vote of confidence, respect, and thanks was tendered to the President of the Committee.

Upon motion, the meeting adjourned.

HARRY SCHNEIDERMAN,

Assistant Secretary.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE:

We meet this year, the fourteenth of the Committee's existence, bereft of two members of your Executive Committee; that exalted leader in Israel, our beloved friend, Jacob H. Schiff, who died on September 25, 1920, and that fine example of Jewish manhood, Colonel Harry Cutler, who passed away on August 27, 1920, both of whom had served on your Committee ever since its inception. At the meeting of the Executive Committee held October 10, 1920, the following minutes were adopted:

JACOB H. SCHIFF

The American Jewish Committee records its deep sorrow and profound sense of loss at the death of Jacob H. Schiff which occurred on September 25 of this year. Among his countless activities in behalf of humanity and of the Jewish people, there was none which commanded his more devoted interest than the purposes to which this Committee is dedicated. Inspired by a profound sense of obligation he had held it from early manhood to be a sacred duty to take such steps as were in his power to alleviate unequal conditions and to mitigate the sufferings to which our brethren in Russia, in Roumania, and other lands were subjected. Sometimes he acted alone; sometimes in hurried consultation with a few friends who gathered upon his initiative when the emergency arose. It was but natural, therefore, that he became one of the first to favor the plan projected in 1906, to bring together the representatives of various national Jewish organizations in the United States with a view to forming a body having for its objects those for which this Committee was finally created. From the organizing session until the very week of his death, the labors to which we were dedicated were constantly in Mr. Schiff's mind. He gave to them his unremitting devotion. To the solution of the problems involved his remarkable intellectual and moral powers were ever available. He never wearied of doing good and his helping hand and his loving heart were never withheld. No one was more punctual in his attendance at our meetings than he. No duty that was imposed upon him or that he voluntarily assumed was ever unfulfilled. He was always staunch in the demand for the equal rights of the Jews everywhere. He always set his face against special privilege and never ceased to insist that with equal rights of citizenship, there came the equal duties and obligations of citizenship.

It is not for this Committee to portray the character or recite the deeds of this our colleague who spent the fulness of his life in works of humanity and in furthering the elevation of his fellow-men, but we may hold him up as a noble exemplar of an American and a Jew, jealous for his country and zealous for his faith and always prepared to do what was in his power to secure justice for his brethren and for all men wheresoever it was denied them and to add to the justice which he thus demanded, that goodness and mercy to which the weak are entitled at the hands of the strong.

The members of this Committee have lost a courteous and considerate associate and a loyal and cherished friend and in recording his services and glorying in his memory, they unite in presenting to his family their deep and heartfelt sympathy.

HARRY CUTLER

The American Jewish Committee, in common with the Jewish Welfare Board of which he was Chairman, and many other organizations have suffered a grievous loss in the untimely death of Colonel Harry Cutler, who was a member of the Committee since its inception and served on the Executive Committee until he was taken from us. Colonel Cutler was earnest and conscientious in the performance of his duties and could always be relied on to devote his great energy and his boundless enthusiasm to whatever activities were undertaken by the Committee. His important contribution to the success of the movement for the abrogation of the treaty of 1832 with the Russian Empire, and his services in connection with the American Jewish Congress and the Peace Conference at Paris are on record. He served America and American Jewry in countless ways. He was an ardent, loyal, and public-spirited citizen who enjoyed the confidence of all who came in contact with him. The Committee has lost a sincere, zealous, and generous supporter, an indefatigable worker, and an enthusiastic and great-hearted friend. The Committee extends to his aged mother its deepest sympathy in her bereavement.

The Committee has also lost by death five members of the General body, two of whom had been members for many years: Israel Friedlaender, of New York City, who was murdered on July 5, 1920, by Bolshevik soldiers in the Ukraine while on a mission for the Joint Distribution Committee; Emanuel Cohen, of Minneapolis, whose death occurred on April 9, 1920; and three who had but recently become members: Isaiah W. Hellman, Jr., of San Francisco, who died on May 10, 1920; Albert Hessberg of Albany, who died July 25; Henry N. Wessel, of Philadelphia, who died on March 6, 1920. The following minutes respecting these deceased members were adopted by the Executive Committee:

ISRAEL FRIEDLAENDER

The Committee is deeply grieved and inexpressibly shocked at the tragic death of Israel Friedlaender, a Professor in the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, a Commissioner to the Ukraine on behalf of the Joint Distribution Committee, and a member of the American Jewish Committee since 1909. Professor Friedlaender cherished a deep interest in the Committee, as he did in numerous other Jewish activities, participating actively in its councils. He contributed much of the large fund of his knowledge toward the elucidation of many questions affecting our sorely tried co-religionists in Europe in whose service he lost his life. The Committee extends to his family its heart-felt sympathy in their sorrow which is shared by the Jewish communities the world over.

HENRY N. WESSEL

The Executive Committee has learned with sorrow of the death of the Hon. Henry N. Wessel, a representative of the Jewish Community of Philadelphia in the Committee, and extends its sympathetic condolence to the family of the deceased, a distinguished jurist and a public-spirited Jew.

EMANUEL COHEN

The Executive Committee of the American Jewish Committee received with profound sorrow the report of the death on April 9, 1920, of Emanuel Cohen, a member of the Committee from Minneapolis since November, 1908. The Committee gives expression to the esteem in which Mr. Cohen was held by the Jewish community in the United States, and to its recognition of his loyalty and devotion to this organization.

ISAIAH W. HELLMAN, JR., AND ALBERT HESSBERG

The Executive Committee has learned with sorrow of the death of Isaiah W. Hellman, Jr., of San Francisco, Cal., and of Albert Hessberg of Albany, N. Y., and extends its sympathetic condolence to the families of the deceased.

A. ANTI-JEWISH PROPAGANDA

This year, your Committee deems it proper to begin its report of the matters which engaged its attention during the past twelve months, with a statement as to the widespread anti-Jewish propaganda now being artificially stimulated. It is a concerted movement conducted in Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Hungary, France, and even our own country, to fasten upon the Jews, as a people, the odium of having brought about the world war and with being the mainspring of all the evils that accompanied and followed it. The sponsors of this movement base their attacks upon the alleged preponderance of Jews in the government of Soviet Russia. These anti-Jewish agitators pretend that they fear that Bolshevik revolutions are menacing the countries of Western Europe and America, and charge that Bolshevism is a purely Jewish movement and part of a plan arranged by an international group of Jews to acquire world domination. In their eagerness to spread their ideas, they have seized upon a spurious "document" entitled "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion," first published in Russia in 1905 by one Nilus, whose very identity is a matter of mystery, who from statements attributed to him by his sponsors was an agent of the Czaristic bureaucracy. This forgery, for such it undoubtedly is, is being circulated broadcast by various secret cabals with autocratic antecedents or sympathies. In Germany it is furthered by the Junkers under the leadership of Count Reventlow; in France by those prominent in the Dreyfus episode; in this country by a group of Russians who were among the leaders of the Black Hundreds; in England by a circle that laments the passing of the Romanoffs. For some time past members of your Committee have known of the existence of this "document"; in fact, the manuscript was offered to your Committee with the erroneous idea that a round sum would be paid for its suppression. Under the title of "The Jewish Peril" it was anonymously published in England in February, 1920, and editions of it have appeared in Germany, France, and, we are informed, also in Denmark, Italy, and Spain. Authorities on Russian literature and history have shown that the Protocols are mere fabrications invented for the purpose of counter-revolutionary propaganda in Russia in 1905, and that they were employed by the officers of General Denikine in order to recruit volunteers for his army by stigmatizing the Bolshevik revolution as a purely Jewish movement to gain control of Russia as part of the larger program of securing world dominion. Though the Protocols were so thoroughly discredited, an American edition of this forgery appeared recently, embellished with an introduction and an epilogue replete with misstatements, half truths, and quotations bearing entirely false appearances due to their isolation from their contexts. We are informed that copies of this scurrilous invention are being extensively circulated as propaganda intended to poison the minds of the American public against the Jewish population of the United States. Increased impetus and currency has been given to this propaganda through the medium of a series of anonymous articles which have been appearing weekly since May 22, in the Dearborn Independent, a publication which, it was believed, was owned or controlled by Henry Ford of Detroit. Immediately after the publication of these articles began, the attention of your President was called to them by a member of your Executive Committee, who deemed it important to ascertain whether they had the sanction of Mr. Ford. Doubting that Mr. Ford knew or approved of this publication, a telegram was sent to him personally on June 3, 1920, as follows:

June 3, 1920.

HENRY FORD (Personal),
Detroit, Michigan.

In the issues of May twenty-second and twenty-ninth of the Dearborn Independent which is understood to be your property or under your control there have appeared two articles which are disseminating antisemitism in its most insidious and pernicious form. The statements which they contain are palpable fabrications and the insinuations with which they abound are the emanations of hatred and prejudice. They constitute a libel upon an entire people who had hoped that at least in America they might be spared the insult the humiliation and the obloquy which these articles are scattering throughout the land and which are echoes from the dark middle ages. Your agencies are said to be engaged in circulating this mischief-breeding sheet. On behalf of my brethren I ask you from whom we had believed that justice might be expected whether these offensive articles have your sanction whether further publications of this nature are to be continued and whether you shall remain silent when your failure to disavow them will be regarded by the general public as an endorsement of them. Three million of deeply wounded Americans are awaiting your answer.

LOUIS MARSHALL

President American Jewish Committee.

On June 5, 1920, the following telegraphic answer was received from the Dearborn Publishing Company:

Detroit, Mich., June 5, 1920.

LOUIS MARSHALL,

President, American Jewish Committee,

120 Broadway, New York City.

We regret the words in which you have seen fit to characterize the Dearborn Independent's articles. Your terms "insidious" "fabrications" "insinuation" "pernicious" "hatred" "prejudice" "libel" "insult" "humiliation" "obloquy" "mischief-making" we resent and deny. Your rhetoric is that of a Bolshevik orator. You mistake our intention. You misrepresent the tone of our articles. You evidently much mistake the persons whom you are addressing. Incidentally you cruelly overwork your most useful term which is "antizemitism." These articles shall continue and we hope you will continue to read them and when you have attained a more tolerable state of mind we shall be glad to discuss them with you.

THE DEARBORN PUBLISHING Co.

Immediately upon its receipt the following reply was made:

June 5, 1920.

DEARBORN PUBLISHING COMPANY,
Detroit, Michigan.

Your telegram in answer to my personal message to Henry Ford has just been received from which I infer that your answer is authorized by him and betokens his sanction of the articles in the Dearborn Independent to which I have taken exception in words that I shall be able to justify.

LOUIS MARSHALL.

Mr. Ford has thus accepted full responsibility for this rancorous attack upon the Jews, which has grown in mendacity, bitterness, and stupidity with every issue.

Concurrently there appeared in the London Morning Post a series of anonymous articles in which the Jews are alleged to be united with the Freemasons in a conspiracy against civilization. These articles have been published in England in book form under the title "The Cause of the World Unrest." This in spite of the fact that a competent authority on Freemasonry has branded as rubbish, imbecility, and a "recrudescence of mendacities," the anti-Masonic propaganda on which a great part of the articles is based, and despite the fact also that the most convincing proofs of the spurious character of the Protocols, that constitute the foundation of the articles, have been presented by competent experts.

In the early part of October, the firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, of New York and London, published an American edition of "The Cause of the World Unrest," with an introduction by H. A. Gwynne, the editor of the London Morning Post, and a publisher's note disavowing responsibility for the contents of the book. Accompanying this publication was an announcement by G. P. Putnam's Sons that an edition of The Protocols would shortly be issued by them. This led to the following correspondence between your President and Major George Haven Putnam, the head of the publishing firm:

1. FROM MR. MARSHALL TO MAJOR
GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM

October 13, 1920.

MY DEAR SIR:

As one who believes in those qualities that constitute the true American spirit, I have been greatly disturbed by the accounts given by the newspapers of the outrage to which you were subjected at the meeting held at Erasmus High School in Brooklyn the other evening. Knowing your patriotism, I can only regard the alleged cause, namely, that you had condemned the Declaration of Independence and were of the opinion that we owed an apology to England for severing our relations with her, as a slander, born of prejudice and ignorance.

I had scarcely finished reading of this episode which had thus aroused my indignation, when I found upon my table a book, bearing the imprint of your firm, entitled "The Cause of the World Unrest," bound in flaming red and purporting to be a republication of articles that have recently appeared in the London Morning Post with which I had become familiar. To say that I was shocked that your honored name should be made the vehicle of disseminating among the American people these outpourings of malice, intolerance and hatred, this witches' broth of virulent poison, is merely to confess the poverty of my vocabulary. On opening the book I turned to the publishers' note, which was apologetic and disclaimed responsibility for the publication. It was followed by an introduction which made it absolutely clear that the purpose of the book was to charge the Jews with an age-long conspiracy to destroy civilization in order that they might absorb the wealth and the power of the world. Thus proclaimed, at length came the stupid drivel intended to support this thesis and calculated to make the Jew repulsive in the eyes of his fellow-men and to exterminate him, not figuratively, but literally, appealing, as it does, to the lowest passions and proceeding upon the same processes that were employed in the Middle Ages for the same object. Then it was the blood accusation, the charge of poisoning wells, of spreading plagues and pestilence, of the desecration of the Host. Now it is a pretended conspiracy to overturn the economic system of the world by inciting warfare and revolution.

The slightest knowledge of history, the most elementary capacity for analysis, or even a minute inkling as to what the Jew is and has been, would suffice to stamp this book and the forged Protocols on which it is based as the most stupendous libels in history. These writings are the work of a band of conspirators who are seeking to continue to make the Jew, as he has been in all the centuries, the scapegoat of autocracy. The Protocols bear the hall-mark of the secret agents of the dethroned Russian bureaucracy, and the book which you have published is a mere babbling reiteration of what the murderers of the Ukraine, of Poland, and of Hungary are urging as a justification for the holocausts of the Jews in which they have been engaged. It has been intimated, and there is much to sustain the theory, that the real purpose of these publications in the United States and England is to arouse sufficient hostility against the Jews to subject them to mob violence and thus to give justification to those who have incited pogroms in Eastern Europe.

I have also observed that, upon the cover of the book to which I am now referring, you are advertising the publication of The Protocols, which I unhesitatingly denounce as on their face palpable forgeries. If you were called upon to circulate counterfeit money or forged bonds, you would shrink in horror at the suggestion. What you have done and what you propose to do is, however, in morals, incalculably worse. You are assisting in spreading falsehoods, in uttering libels, the effect of which will be felt for decades to come. You are giving them respectability, whilst the name of the author is shrouded in secrecy. Even Mr. Gwynne does not avow paternity for the book which he has heralded. Much as you may desire to shake off responsibility therefor, the real responsibility for hurling this bomb, for such it is, prepared though it has been by others, rests upon you. Whoever may read this book and is of such a low type of intelligence as to be influenced by it will not be apt to draw the fine ethical distinctions with which you are seeking to salve your conscience. As a patriotic American, do you believe that you are contributing to the creation of that spirit of justice and fair-play, of unity and harmony, which is the very foundation of that Americanism for which every good citizen has yearned, when you stimulate hatred and passion by the publication of these dreadful falsehoods? If there should occur in this country in consequence of your publications and those of Henry Ford what is earnestly desired by the anti-Semites with whom you have arrayed yourself, do you suppose that, when the Almighty calls you to a reckoning and asks you whether you have ever borne false witness against your neighbor, you will be guiltless in His eyes because of your publishers' note disavowing responsibility?

I know that you must have been pained, as I was when I read of the treatment to which you were subjected because of lying accusations directed against you. Are you able to appreciate the pain, the grief, the agony, that you are causing to three millions of your fellow-countrymen, and to millions of men, women and children in other parts of the world, by your participation in the disgraceful and inhuman persecution which is now being insidiously carried on by means of publications in the distribution of which you are now actively engaged? I look upon this as a tragedy. Yours, in sadness,

LOUIS MARSHALL.

2. MAJOR PUTNAM'S REPLY

New York, October 15, 1920.

DEAR MR. MARSHALL:

Your letter of the 13th inst., which has to do with the publication of the volume entitled The World Unrest and the announcement of the companion volume The Protocols, has been read before the members of our Publishing Board and has received the respectful consideration to which any communication from a citizen of your standing and reputation is assuredly entitled. I am asked by my associates to make report as follows as to our own understanding of the matters in question:

1. We are not prepared to accept your view of the responsibility that attaches to a publishing imprint, or to the association of such imprint with one volume or another. We believe that our own policy in this matter is in accord with that of the leading publishing Houses on both sides of the Atlantic. It would be impossible to carry on the business of publishing books of opinion, whether the opinions have to do with issues of today or with matters of the past, if the publisher was assumed to be in accord with the conclusions arrived at by one author or another. It is the intention to bring into print only such volumes as may present on such issues information that is understood to make an addition to the knowledge of the subject, or conclusions which appear to be entitled to consideration, to analysis, or possibly to refutation.

2. We have on our own catalogue, for instance, volumes expressing almost every phase of theological or religious belief. The list includes some books accepted by the Christian Scientists as fairly representative of their doctrines. In publishing such books, we have, of course, no intention of announcing ourselves as upholding the theories of the Christian Scientists any more than in the publication of a volume by a Presbyterian divine we have expressed our acceptance of the Westminster catechism, or in printing a book by an Episcopal friend, we have been prepared to approve the reasonableness of the Thirty-Nine Articles.

3. The volume, The World Unrest, was, as you will have noted, brought into publication in London at the instance of Mr. Gwynne, the scholarly editor of the Morning Post. You doubtless have knowledge of the journals of England and will realize that the Post does not belong to the sensation-monger journals like Bottomley's John Bull or Hearst's American. It is a conservative paper which has the reputation of avoiding sensational material.

Mr. Gwynne had convinced himself that the papers brought into print in the Post, and later published under his direction in book form, were deserving of consideration. As we have stated in the Publishers' Note, we are not prepared to express any opinion whatsoever in regard to the value of the so-called information presented, or as to the weight of the conclusions arrived at by the writer and endorsed by Mr. Gwynne. The recommendation came to us that as the Gwynne volume used as a large part of its text the document entitled The Protocols, the readers of The World Unrest would be interested in having an opportunity of examining the full text of the Protocols. You have already knowledge of this curious document. It has, it seems, been in print since 1905, and possibly earlier. An edition was published some months back by Eyre & Spottiswoode, conservative law publishers of London. An edition has also for some time been in print in Boston. The text that was brought to us is a translation freshly made from the Russian and is accompanied by a record of what is known of the original document.

It is evident that the document has, as you point out, no voucher for authenticity, and it is quite possible that it will be found to possess no historic importance. Attention has again been directed to it during the past year simply on the ground, according at least to the understanding of Mr. Gwynne's author and of himself, that certain of the instructions given and policies recommended in The Protocols appear to have been carried out by the Bolshevik government in Russia. Certain suggestions in The Protocols have also been connected with the policies of the Zionists, policies which, according to Mr. Gwynne and some other writers, are causing serious unrest in Palestine, Syria, and Arabia.

In presenting The Protocols to American readers in a carefully printed edition, we have not the least intention of expressing the view that the documents are authentic, or that they will in the end be considered as possessing historic authority.

Mr. Gwynne takes the ground that neither The World Unrest or The Protocols themselves present charges against the Jews as a whole. They emphasize certain things that have been done, or are alleged to have been done, by certain groups of Jews. It would be as fair to say that a record of lynching in Texas or Arkansas, or a record of the attempt of the Bryan group to secure the payment of debts 50 cents on the dollar, was to be considered as a charge against the whole American people.

Mr. Gwynne's associates take the ground that the leading Jews on both sides of the Atlantic, men whose patriotism is unquestioned, ought not to put these documents to one side as of trifling importance. The time may very properly have come at which the charges made, as said, only against certain groups of Jews should be analyzed by the Jews whose judgments would be accepted as authoritative by English and American readers. If the charge is unfounded that Bolshevism as carried on in Russia has been conducted largely under Jewish direction, the statement ought to be refuted.

I received only yesterday copy of a monthly entitled The Brooklyn Anti-Bolshevist. The magazine undertakes to make "defense of American institutions against the Jewish Bolshevist doctrines of Morris Hillquit and Leon Trotsky." It seems to me that American citizens of the Jewish race (and the group comprises some of the best citizens that we have) might properly interest themselves in making clear to the public that there is no foundation for any general charge against the world's patriotism of the Jewish race.

I wish very much that you might yourself be interested in preparing a volume that should give consideration to the whole subject matter, and particularly, of course, to these publications which have come into print as a result of the world's indignation against the Moscow government.

G. P. Putnam's Sons would be well pleased to associate the imprint of their New York and London Houses with such a volume from the pen of a distinguished jurist like yourself.

One further thought occurs to me: You and I are believers in freedom of speech. We recognize that in war times certain reservations are in order for the sake of the nation, but we hold that, with the necessary reservations as to the rights of an individual, or as to a possible libel upon an individual, it is in order, and from the point of view of the community wise, to allow full freedom for platform utterances. If, however, this be true for the spoken word, it should logically be applicable also to the word that comes into print.

In case you may be interested in considering the suggestion of a monograph from your pen to be prepared by yourself, or by some competent authority whom you might be able to interest, I should be ready to keep an appointment for a personal word at such time and place as you might find convenient.

Submitting the suggestion for your consideration, I am with cordial regards,

Yours faithfully,

GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM.

3. MR. MARSHALL TO MAJOR PUTMAN

New York City, October 29, 1920.

MY DEAR SIR:

Absence from the city and professional engagements have prevented me from replying earlier to yours of the 15th inst., in which you define your policy regarding the publication of The Cause of the World Unrest and your announcement of your intended publication of The Protocols.

I cannot accept the theories on which you seek to justify acts which, in all moderation, I sought to characterize in my letter of the 13th inst. You disregard entirely the proposition on which my criticism is based. Nobody can go farther than

I do in upholding the freedom of the press and freedom of speech. It has been my privilege to aid in the creation of important precedents in furtherance of these fundamentals of liberty. Libel and slander, however, have always been looked upon in American law as abuses of a free press and of free speech and as attacks upon the integrity of the constitutional guaranties that you invoke. Nor do I question the right of any publisher to issue "books of opinion," to whatever subject the opinions may relate. They may be polemical or they may attack the soundness of scientific, political or theological theories or doctrines. No fair-minded man would for a moment venture to find fault because of strictures directed against his cherished doxy.

The Protocols and The Cause of the World Unrest are not, however, books of opinion. They assume to deal with facts. The Protocols purport to be the pronouncements of so-called "Wise Men of Zion." The Cause of the World Unrest undertakes to charge that the Jews and the Freemasons are together engaged in a conspiracy for the overthrow of civilization and the arrogation by them of world domination. It is these alleged facts that I denounce as falsehoods and as libels criminal in intent and criminal in their operation. The Protocols, which are made the basis of the Cause of the World Unrest, and which you properly describe as companion volumes, are so intrinsically false that even Mr. Gwynne concedes that he himself has a serious doubt as to their genuineness. That The Protocols are a fabrication similar to those that have appeared in every period of history, appears from every line of that document. I am credibly informed that the manuscript was offered for publication to seven different publishing houses in this country, who refused to have their names connected with it, before Small, Maynard & Co. undertook to issue it to the American public. The author of the Cause of the World Unrest hides behind anonymity. You yourself speak of the author as being "Mr. Gwynne's author." Apparently even you do not know the pedigree of this incendiary book. Yet you have, I repeat, given it your endorsement by publishing it, even though you disavow responsibility. Your position is that of one who endorses a note to give it currency and at the same time makes a mental reservation against meeting his obligation.

No, Major Putnam, the principle which you seek to establish will not work. Whoever touches pitch is defiled. Whoever retails falsehoods and spreads them, whether it be orally or through the medium of the press, is responsible for those falsehoods in the eyes of God and man. The law of libel utterly disregards the sophistries by which you are seeking to justify this terrible attack upon your fellow-citizens. It will not do to say that you have many friends among the Jews whom you respect and that these books are not intended to reflect upon all Jews. The world is not so discriminating. People whose passions are aroused do not differentiate. The forger of The Protocols and the mysterious author of The Cause of the World Unrest make no distinctions. Neither did their prototypes of the Middle Ages nor the Black Hundreds of modern Russia indulge in such refinements. Troy and Tyre were alike to them.

Do not for a moment misunderstand me. I contend that there are no Jews who are now engaged or who have ever been engaged in a conspiracy such as that charged by you as existing in these books which emerge smoking from your presses. The cry of Bolshevism will not suffice. Your reference to the Brooklyn Anti-Bolshevist shows what a sad pass you have reached. To shelter yourself behind the bulwarks of an infamous pasquinade of the guttersnipe variety and to insinuate that because that sheet pretends to defend American institutions "against the Jewish Bolshevik doctrines of Morris Hillquit and Leon Trotsky" you may therefore descend to the same depths, is a revelation to me. I had not believed that any real, true American would thus lend himself to the creation of ill-will and malevolence. The fact that out of the mass of Russian Jews there is an infinitesimal percentage who are Bolsheviks, affords no justification for laying the sins of Bolshevism at the door of the Jewish people. To say that Bolshevism is a Jewish movement is as ridiculous as to say that the Jews are responsible for capitalism, or, because there are Jewish musicians, actors and poets, that music, the drama and poetry are Jewish movements.

I am not a Zionist, and yet I regard the slurs that these books are attempting to make against Zionism to be unworthy. The very Zionists whom these books are attacking have been persecuted by the Bolsheviks and have been denounced as counter-revolutionists, just as the mass of the Jews of Russia have been pursued as members of the bourgeoisie. I am not a member of the Masonic or of any other secret order, but the attempt in these books to charge Freemasonry with participation in such a conspiracy as is proclaimed, almost argues the existence of a pathological condition on the part of the author that betokens mental aberration. When one remembers that fifteen of the Presidents of the United States, including George Washington, have been Freemasons, it is unnecessary to go further in condemnation of these volumes which you are pleased to denominate "books of opinion."

I had not believed that a Jew in this country would ever be called upon to occupy the humiliating position of defending his people against charges such as those which are being spread broadcast through your agency. If ever the time comes when it shall be desirable to answer such books, I am quite sure that it will be unnecessary for me to avail myself of your invitation to make use of the services of your firm, as publishers.

Very truly yours,

LOUIS MARSHALL.

4. MAJOR PUTNAM TO MR. MARSHALL

November 1, 1920.

DEAR MR. MARSHALL:

Mr. Gwynne, at whose instance we brought into print the American edition of his volume on The World Unrest, had taken the ground that the publication of the document known as The Protocols might throw light upon the organization of the Bolsheviks. Their operations have caused grave concern throughout the world and they are, therefore, a matter of legitimate public discussion.

It was his opinion that if it had not been for the apprehension aroused by Bolshevism, the document would probably have been permitted to rest in obscurity.

An edition of The Protocols was, therefore, published in London by Eyre & Spottiswoode, law publishers of high standing.

It had seemed to us that the readers of The World Unrest were entitled to have the opportunity of examining the complete document (to which frequent references are made in Mr. Gwynne's volume) and we had, therefore, undertaken the publication of a carefully prepared translation of The Protocols.

The production of the edition announced by us, which is now nearly in readiness, has involved a considerable outlay.

We now find, however, that an edition printed in Boston is being distributed as a regular publication. There is no necessity for bringing into print another volume containing substantially the same material. We have decided, therefore, in deference to the objections raised by yourself, and by my valued friend, Oscar Straus, not to proceed with the publication. I am,

Yours very truly,

GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM.

In the meantime your Committee has been engaged in giving intensive study to the problem. It was aware of the use that had been made of the manuscript of "The Protocols" during the war and subsequently. It was impossible, however, to inaugurate any practical action that would prevent the secret circulation of this infamous document; nor was it anticipated that any reputable publisher would be willing to put it into print or that any responsible person would stand sponsor for it. When, however, this expectation was not realized, your Committee proceeded to encourage experts to prepare a reasoned answer to these infamous charges against the Jewish people, with the thought that they might find it desirable to issue it in book form and thus counteract the efforts of unscrupulous men to malign the Jews. The manuscript of such a book is now practically completed, and it is expected that the author will publish the book at an early day.

Believing, however, that this subject is one in which all Jews are equally interested, invitations have been extended to the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the United Synagogue, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, the Provisional Committee of the American Jewish Congress, the Zionist Organization of America, and other Jewish bodies, to confer with the Committee for the purpose of taking joint action and of dealing with the subject in such manner as will present to the American people the answer of the Jews to the assault that has been made upon their honor.

B. FOREIGN AFFAIRS

In the report which was presented to you on the occasion of the Thirteenth Annual Meeting, a brief survey was given of the conditions of our brethren in the countries of Europe as affected by the world war and by the minor racial and national conflicts which followed it. Your Committee is unable to report any considerable improvement in the deplorable situation set forth in that survey with the exception of that in Roumania. On the contrary, the sanguinary war between Poland and Russia which was waged until a few weeks ago has cast the population of Eastern Europe into even lower depths of misery, and the millions of Jews in that region have borne as usual more than their proportionate share of suffering.

1. POLAND

Details of the present condition of the Jews of Poland indicate that it is just as pitiable as it was following the conclusion of the world war. The reports of the American and British Commissions to investigate the situation show that there exists between the different classes of the population a mutual distrust and antagonism. This condition, in a greater or less degree, obtains also in other parts of the former Russian Empire, with the exception of Lithuania, and the history of the Jews of these regions will, no doubt, for some time to come, exhibit a series of struggles on the part of the Jews and the liberal elements in the general population to overcome the racial animosities bequeathed by Czardom.

In July last, during the crisis in the Russo-Polish war, your Committee received information from reliable sources that attempts were being made by the Polish press and anti-Jewish agitators to incite riots against the Jewish population of several large centers by seeking to identify the Jews with the Bolsheviki. Your Committee immediately transmitted this information to our Government with the prayer that it employ its good offices to prevent threatened outbreaks. Happily the crisis passed without any concerted attacks, although sporadic disorders continued to occur.

The President of your Committee, while in Washington, called on Prince Lubomirski, the Polish Minister, and discussed with him at some length the relations of the Poles and the Jews. It was arranged that Mr. Berenson, the Secretary of the Polish Legation, was to take up the matter in all of its details at an early date. After some delay such a conference took place, Mr. Berenson being then on the eve of his departure for Poland. He requested that the substance of the interview be reduced to writing, so that it might be presented to the Polish Government. That was done, and a copy of the letter was transmitted to Prince Lubomirski, who duly acknowledged it. A copy of the correspondence follows:

October 29, 1920.

YOUR EXCELLENCY:

You will recollect that when I called on you some months ago to discuss Polish conditions, at which time we had a very pleasant interview, you stated that you would at an early opportunity request the Secretary of your Legation, Mr. Berenson, to call on me to take up the general subject of the relation of the Jews in Poland to their fellow-citizens and to consider the attitude of the Jews of the United States toward Poland. I had hoped that he would have had an opportunity to call on me much sooner than he did. He recently paid me a visit, informing me that he was about to return to Poland. We discussed the subject which I had previously taken up with you, at considerable length. At his request I reduced to writing the substance of what I had said to him concerning the attitude of the American Jews toward Poland, and sent the same to him to the Hotel Lafayette, in this city, as requested, and a copy to him in care of the Polish Legation. I do not know whether he has as yet returned to Poland, or, if he has, whether he had an opportunity to communicate to you the contents of my letter. Believing that it would be helpful for you personally to be in possession of my views I now take the liberty of handing you a copy of that communication.

With much esteem, I am

Sincerely yours,

LOUIS MARSHALL.

October 16, 1920.

MY DEAR MR. BERENSON:

Pursuant to my promise that I would make a full statement to you as to the attitude of the American Jews toward Poland, in order that you may on your return to your native country be enabled to speak with authority, I take this opportunity of summarizing what I said to you at our very pleasant conference on Thursday.

The Jews of this country are not and never have been hostile to the people of Poland. Not only have they been without the slightest desire to injure Poland, but because of the fact that several millions of their brethren now live there and will continue to dwell in Poland, they have every desire to see Poland prosperous and happy. They have, however, been deeply grieved at the manner in which the Jews of Poland have been treated during the last ten years. It has been the avowed policy of an important political party of Poland to drive the Jews out of Poland, so far as that could be accomplished by means of a widespread and deliberate economic boycott, the persistent infliction of indignities, humiliation and insult upon and the deprivation of the Jews of Poland of the enjoyment of those rights of citizenship that are possessed by Poles who are not of Jewish extraction. This course of procedure was initiated prior to the outbreak of the World War and was in no manner due to war conditions. Mr. Dmowski avowed to me on several occasions in the fall of 1918, that he himself had initiated this movement and that its purpose was precisely what I have stated it to be. Immediately after my first interview with him I made a record of what he had said. It will be found on pages 48-53 of the pamphlet narrating the proceedings of the concluding session of the American Jewish Congress, which I hand you herewith. He subsequently reiterated what he had said to me, in the presence of at least a dozen other gentlemen at a dinner given to Mr. Paderewski shortly before his departure for Paris, just before the convening of the Peace Conference there.

At that time the Jews who were present with me at this interview, among whom were the Honorable Oscar S. Straus, the Honorable Julian W. Mack and Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, sought to obtain from Mr. Paderewski and Mr. Dmowski assurances that the boycott would cease and that the Jews would receive equality of treatment with all other Poles. To our great regret no such assurances were forthcoming. We were only regaled with statements that consisted of mere generalities and that referred to the remote future. At this time there had occurred the attacks upon the Jews at Lemberg, and we asked for assurances that similar occurrences would be prevented. We were merely told that there had never been a pogrom in Poland, and were unable to obtain the slightest satisfaction.

Instead of improving, conditions grew from bad to worse. The Jews continued to be humiliated and were discriminated against in every way—they were attacked upon the streets and in public places. They were not protected against these aggressions. There occurred in at least a dozen cities and towns what euphemistically have been termed “excesses,” the occurrence of which was denied but has been established by uncontradicted evidence, as shown by the report of the American Mission of which the Honorable Henry Morgenthau was the Chairman and of the English Mission which was headed by Sir Stuart Samuel. The existence of these outrages was also recognized in the proclamations of Generals Pilsudski and Haller and by the official action of the Seim.

The reports that come from Poland from disinterested observers, not Jewish, satisfy me that, notwithstanding the acceptance by Poland of the terms of the Minority Treaty signed by its representatives, Mr. Paderewski and Mr. Dmowski, at Versailles on June 28, 1919, the letter and spirit of this treaty have not been observed, and that the Jews continue to be subjected to all manner of hostility and discrimination.

After the signing of this treaty I had the honor to call on Mr. Paderewski in Paris, in company with Mr. Nahum Sokolow, a Polish citizen and a man who is esteemed throughout Europe. We acted as the representatives of the Comité des Délégations Juives, of which I had the honor to be the President, to congratulate Poland, through him, upon the attainment of her long-sought restoration to independence and sovereignty, and at the same time we expressed our appreciation of what we looked upon as an act of magnanimity, that of the acceptance of the principles laid down in the Minority Treaty in the hour of Poland's glory. We discussed with him fully the tragic situation of the Jews of Poland and expressed the desire that the past should be forgotten and that the Poles and the Jews should in the future strive together to make of Poland a happy and prosperous nation. Mr. Paderewski expressed great satisfaction with what we had said and asked us to communicate to him in a letter the substance of our oral remarks, which he believed would be helpful in bringing about the accomplishment of what we so ardently desired. We at once complied with his wishes and transmitted to him our written statement. To the same end I took it upon myself to communicate with the leading Jews of Poland, with the desire that they should join hands with the political leaders of Poland in bringing about an era of friendship, conciliation and good feeling. From what I have learned I am confident that this expresses the cherished desire of the Jews of Poland.

I am aware of the fact that the feeling has been aroused that there are some Jews in Poland who have sympathized with the Bolsheviks and that that fact has been made the pretext for the harsh treatment that has been accorded to the Jews and for such massacres as occurred in Pinsk. It is, however, not the fact that the Jews, as such, are inclined to Bolshevism. The great mass of them are opposed to it. Their interest, their education, their natural disposition, would lead them to oppose any form of communism. They are individualists. They belong to the bourgeoisie or the middle classes. They are in the main devout followers of religion. They believe in the sanctity of the family and of the home. They are believers in the economic system that has prevailed in all civilized States. The fact, however, that some of them, goaded to desperation by the brutality to which they have been subjected, may have been driven into the ranks of the Bolsheviks, and that when the Bolshevik hordes entered the towns in which they lived they remained there because they could not flee, and were obliged to hold converse with those in occupancy, just as they were compelled to do when the Germans invaded Poland, has been the cause for singling them out for condign punishment and for making them the target of anti-Semitic propaganda.

Nobody who knows the psychology of the Jew, his unfortunate situation during the Russian régime, the oppression and discrimination of which he was the victim in consequence of the multitude of laws and decisions by which he was sought to be made the scapegoat of autocracy, can honestly believe the slanders that have been uttered against the Jews of Poland and that have been reiterated in the Polish press with unexampled virulence. So far as I know there has been no effort made to suppress this cruel propaganda, to prevent the publication of these libels, to indicate a desire by the Government that the Jews shall be treated as human beings and as on a parity with all Poles. Although the Jews have served in the Polish army and have been willing to render military service, just as they did before Poland achieved her independence, they have not only been looked upon with suspicion, but they have been treated contemptuously and have suffered from discrimination of the most pronounced character by their officers and at the hands of their companions in arms, who have been permitted to make them the butts of their hatred.

Now, my dear Mr. Berenson, you certainly know that these are the facts. It is quite possible that there may have been at times exaggerations, just as we find exaggerations in the newspapers of the United States, of England, of France, and of every other country. That does not, however, justify one in disregarding actual occurrences which have been so numerous, so persistent and so universal as to make it impossible to ignore them. The admissions of the Polish authorities make it unnecessary to establish the existence of the facts which they themselves have officially recognized. This being the case, is it surprising that the Jews of America, many of whom are of kin to those who are thus suffering in Poland—sons, brothers, sisters, cousins and nephews—should be aroused by these conditions, especially when they had hoped for better things after the downfall of the Russian bureaucracy? Is it to be wondered at if, in their agony and despair, they should occasionally sound a note of protest and of indignation, or, if you will, of unfriendliness? Have not the Poles, to their great honor, be it said, indicated a like attitude for more than a century toward the treatment that their brethren had received at the hands of Russia, Prussia and Austria? Would it have been possible for Poland to regain her freedom if that passion for liberty and equality had not been kept alive in the breasts of all Poles, even during the darkest days of Poland's history? You know how loyal the Jews of Poland were to their native land in the revolution of 1863, and at all times when an effort was made for the regaining of Polish independence. My personal sympathy with Poland was aroused in my childhood by Polish Jews with whom I became acquainted and who evinced a spirit of patriotism which was inspiring. I can assure you that, if the Polish Government and the Polish people should put an end to the boycott and to the hatred of the Jew of which they have of late given evidence, if the Jew were treated in Poland as he is in the United States, Poland would at once gain three million advocates here, and all of the influence at their command would be cast in the scales in favor of the Polish Government.

You have been in this country long enough to know what a valuable asset the Polish and Russian Jews who have come hither have been to the United States. They have become an important factor in our industrial and commercial life. In fact they have created new industries. They are producers, engaged in every form of manufacture, in all the trades, as well as in the professions. In the great majority of instances they arrived here without financial means, and yet, through their industry, perseverance, intelligence and strict attention to their duties, they have added to the wealth of the Nation. They have not been drones. They have not become public charges. They have not created a political or social problem. They are respected by the great mass of the American people. The Jews who have remained in Poland are of the same flesh and blood. They have the same innate qualities. Their misery and misfortunes have, to outward appearance, made them the objects of ridicule and of repulsion to those who do not know and understand the inner man. All that they require is an opportunity, the advantages of liberty and equality, a friendly word, kindness instead of harshness, and it will inevitably follow that they will do for Poland what those who have come here have done for America. What Poland needs is the establishment of industries, the development of her great resources and of her commerce. Give the Jew half a chance and he will make the present industrial desert blossom as the rose. If the Jews of Poland obtain that recognition for which I appeal, there is not the slightest doubt but that the Jews of America will be prepared to help in the industrial development of Poland and to throw the weight of their influence in favor of any movement looking in that direction.

The Jews of Poland and of America have, however, begun to despair. They feel that the Polish Government is unwilling to carry out the spirit of the Minority Treaty or to give the Jew the rights to which he is entitled as a citizen of Poland and as a human being. It is not, however, too late to bring about a different state of mind. The initiative must come from the Polish Government and from the Polish people. They must give evidence of a change of heart. They must instill confidence in those who have been broken and bruised and indicate to them that a new epoch is dawning and that henceforth the misunderstandings, differences and animosities of the past are to be forever buried in oblivion. Let the Jews know that they are to have a part and lot in the restoration of Poland and in its development and that they are no longer to be despised and contemned, and I can assure you that there will be none so happy to aid in the accomplishment of all that the most loyal and patriotic Pole can pray for, as the Jews of America.

Very cordially yours,

LOUIS MARSHALL.

LEON BERENSON, Esq.,

LEGATION OF POLAND
WASHINGTON

October 30, 1920.

MR. LOUIS MARSHALL,
120 Broadway, New York City.

MY DEAR MR. MARSHALL:

Thank you very much for your letter of October 20th and a copy of your letter to Mr. Berenson, which I read with interest.

As perhaps you know, I am deeply interested in the bringing about of better understanding between Christian and Jewish populations of my country. I think that fundamentally the root of whatever trouble has occurred in Poland is economic, and I am endeavoring to bring about better conditions on that basis. In the interest of mutual understanding, I have consented to a conference with representatives of the American Jewish Congress, which will take place some time in the near future.

I have pleasant remembrances of our last meeting, and I look forward to seeing you again some time soon with much pleasure.

With all best wishes, I am

Very truly yours,

CASIMIR LUBOMIRSKI,
Minister of Poland.

Shortly after this correspondence had been interchanged, Prince Lubomirski indicated his willingness to meet a delegation of the Provisional Committee of the Jewish Congress to discuss the same subject, and at the request of this Committee your President attended the conference, and addressed Prince Lubomirski on the lines of the Berenson letter. At the same time a formal Memorial was presented to him which is as follows:

We have gathered for the purpose of considering what may be done for the relief of our brethren in Eastern Europe, and particularly to put an end to the indignities, brutalities and persecution which they continue to be subjected to in the Ukraine, in Hungary, in Poland and other territories.

So far as Poland is concerned we desire to place upon record that the Jews of the United States are not now and never have been hostile to that land. On the contrary, they have at all times sympathized with the aspiration of the Polish people for a restoration of their freedom. Because of that fact and because of our anxiety to promote the welfare of the millions of our brethren who now live and will continue to live in Poland, whose ancestors have for centuries lived there and regarded it as their home, we are deeply interested in the perpetuation of the present free and independent Republic of Poland. We regard that whatever tends to make the Republic happy, peaceful and prosperous at the same time contributes to the happiness of the Jews of that land, and it is equally true that whatever tends to the amelioration of the condition of the Jews of Poland, inevitably will lead to the prosperity of Poland. We, therefore, view with satisfaction the cessation of the warfare in which the Republic of Poland has so long been engaged and we rejoice in the assurance that peace may henceforth be maintained within her borders.

In giving utterance to these sentiments we would, however, be lacking in candor if we failed to voice our grave concern at the treatment to which our brethren have been subjected in Poland for some time past. With every desire to foster amity it is apparent that so long as the Jews of Poland are compelled to suffer from the unhappy conditions to which we have adverted, those who are of kin to them in America must certainly do all that lies legitimately within their power to bring about amelioration. While the Jews of America stand ready and willing to aid in the creation of a prosperous Poland, they feel justified in entertaining the expectation that Poland shall remove all obstacles that stand in the way of co-operation by the Jews of Poland in the attainment of what should be the united purpose of all of the inhabitants of Poland—its social, economic, civic and political development. In order to speed the realization of this purpose, it is our earnest hope that the Polish Government may proceed at once to carry out in letter and spirit the terms of the so-called Minority Treaty which was promulgated on June 28, 1919, and which was thereafter confirmed by the Polish Diet. To do this the following action is deemed necessary:

(1) To issue immediate orders addressed to the Polish Army forbidding attacks upon the persons or interference with the property of the Jewish inhabitants of Poland.

(2) To take the necessary steps to bring such orders to the attention of all of the officers and soldiers of the Polish Army.

(3) To issue similar proclamations addressed to all civilians and to take such measures as shall bring the same to the attention of the entire public.

(4) To prohibit the display or dissemination of all posters, signs and placards and the circulation of all newspapers and other publications that may incite or tend to provoke attacks upon the Jews or that may in any way tend to subject them to violence, contempt or ridicule.

(5) To take such measures as shall be necessary to enforce the several provisions of the Minority Treaty, and especially such as guarantee the racial, religious and linguistic minorities of Poland, freedom from political or economic discrimination.

(6) To take especial precautions during the period of the demobilization of the Army to prevent excesses against the Jews.

At the close of the conference Prince Lubomirski made the following statement:

I have endeavored to make clear to the conference that for nearly two years, owing to the war with Soviet Russia, an abnormal state of affairs had obtained in Poland and that such things as those of which these gentlemen complained were held by my government in deepest reprobation. Now that peace has come to Poland, my government in accordance with its traditional good-will toward its Jewish citizens is sure to put forth every endeavor in order to prevent any excesses and indignities against Jews such as are inspired in largest part by the excitement incident to a state of war.

In this spirit, Poland in good faith became a party to the treaty for the protection and equal rights of racial, religious, and linguistic minorities and by an overwhelming vote of the Polish Diet, ratified and confirmed that Minorities Treaty, and needless to say, will carry out its provisions.

I know that my government has already taken steps severely and exemplarily to punish those who have been found guilty of violence against the person or property of Jews. I have read to the conference a report I recently received from my government, which detailed the execution of death penalties upon Polish soldiers who were taken committing excesses upon Jews.

The Minister of War, moreover, issued on October 24, 1920, the most stringent regulations in order to prohibit officers or soldiers of the army from committing acts of violence against the Jews of Poland and these regulations, of special importance during the period of demobilization, are, if occasion demands, to be strictly and inexorably enforced by court-martial.

I have no doubt that with the beginning of the régime of peace the state of affairs, called by the gentlemen "the economic boycott" but which seems to me to have been only an ordinary consequence of war, will cease, and that concerning provocative and inflammatory anti-Jewish articles in Polish newspapers, the Government will use its whole power to prevent them.

I have heard with much satisfaction the assurances given by Messrs. Marshall, Mack, Wise, Rothenberg and their colleagues that they deeply rejoice in the reparation of the crime done Poland by the partitions, and that they have been and continue to be the sincerest well-wishers of the Polish Republic. They understand as I do that in a free and enlightened republic such as Poland, all elements of the population must work together for the well-being of their common country in the spirit of good will and mutual respect and that the Jews of Poland can and will loyally serve Poland, which is resolved upon such a course of justice toward all its peoples as alone are worthy of its spirit and traditions.

My government has resumed a series of meetings, interrupted by the war, with the leaders of the Jewish people of Poland, and from these meetings will undoubtedly come the longed-for harmony of spirit and unity of action between the various elements of the country essential to its permanent peace and well-being. I shall have pleasure in forwarding to my government the resolutions submitted to me by the gentlemen, together with an expression of my earnest hope that the conference which I have summoned may be helpful toward the end desired by all of us—the permanent betterment of relations between the Polish Government and its Jewish citizens.

The documents referred to by Prince Lubomirski follow:

On the 14th of October, the Attorney General of the Army addressed to the War Minister the following report:

In view of numerous complaints and grievances in connection with the pretended non-application of reprisals and penalties to those guilty of crimes committed against the Jews, crimes belonging to the competence of the military tribunals, it must be stated that these cases, unsupported by concrete evidence, do not at all correspond to the real state of affairs.

Every criminal brought to justice was treated with all the severity imposed by the law.

According to accounts still incomplete, mention should be made of the following verdicts pronouncing sentence of death for brigandage or pillage of the Jews, which verdicts were executed:

1. Boleslas Kowlewski, former Bolshevik police agent.
2. Borys Low.
3. Gregory Wowczak.
4. Gregory Romanowski.

These four were condemned for having robbed Jewel Goldman in Minsk.

The verdict was pronounced by the Court Martial of the military command of the region of White Ruthenia.

5. Antony Woysznarowicz, lancer.

6. Nicholas Prokopczyk, lancer.

Both of them for having robbed Berek Owsiejew in Dejdu-lowicze.

Sentence was pronounced by the Court Martial of the military command of White Ruthenia.

7. Frank Bielski, soldier, for having robbed Szenwitz. Sentenced by Court Martial at Plock.

8. Stanislas Czyk.

9. Stanislas Kosciolek, N-C Officer.

10. Frank Chwiela, soldier.

11. Stanislas Slomka.

All four condemned for crime against Feiga Weingarten in Nasielsk. Sentence was pronounced by the Court Martial of the 11th Division.

12. Joseph Szalapowski, soldier, for mortally wounding Herz Rotenstein. Sentenced by the Court Martial of the region of Lublin.

13. Jacob Zygoski, soldier, for robbery in Chelm. Sentenced by the Court Martial of the zone of the 3rd Army.

14. Theophile Blaskiewicz, for having robbed Wolf Rosenstein and Mayer Kohn near Zambow. Sentenced by the ambulant Court Martial at Lomza.

In the last-named case, by the pardon of the Chief of the State (decision of the 18th September) the sentence was commuted to eight years' imprisonment.

In addition, in a number of affairs where the parties wronged were Jews, the delinquents were sentenced to periods of imprisonment up to 15 years. Accounts of these sentences will be published.

Order by the Polish Minister of War Against Anti-Jewish Excesses:

Anti-Jewish excess still constantly occur on the railroads and in the railroad stations. They are becoming more violent, being frequently accompanied by the persecution of aged people, and show a lack of discipline and of the feeling of honor on the part of the Polish soldier.

An end must be put to this once for all. I therefore order:

The Chief of the fourth section and the general district commanders are to deliver orders to all subordinate formations instructing soldiers and officers that there must be an end to the constant anti-Jewish excesses, and that all reserve battalions, batteries, and squadrons in issuing their marching orders must each and every time instruct the departing soldiers as to their behavior during the journey. Commanders of transports, on their own responsibility, must appoint special guards whose duty it will be to keep order during the journey. After the arrival of the transport at the appointed place, the commander of the transport must present a written report on the journey. Neither soldiers nor officers will be allowed to leave stations arrived at during the journey or quit the precincts of such stations, for instance, in order to buy provisions, etc. Soldiers leaving separately must be instructed as to their behavior during the journey by their officer in command, who must give such soldiers written instructions for the route.

Station commanders must call the attention of commanders of transports to the present order and in case of disorders arising, must use all means at their disposition to put a stop to them, and must report such incidents immediately, giving the name of the commander of the transport in question and the number of the transport to the presidential bureau of the War Ministry.

All disorders must be severely punished, while officers who tolerate anti-Jewish excesses must be held responsible, no matter what the consequences. Active participants in excesses will be liable to disciplinary and judicial punishment and those guilty of inflicting grievous bodily harm, of robbery, violence, arson, etc., will be punished by Court Martial. Officers who quietly look upon soldiers persecuting defenseless Jews I do not consider worthy to wear the uniform of a Polish officer.

The above is to be made known to the whole army.

Minister of War,

POLEXTERNE.

2. SOVIET RUSSIA

There has been little change in the condition of the Jews of Soviet Russia. Very little reliable information is at hand, but the most trustworthy reports indicate that the bulk of the Jews there, while not victims of pogroms, are nevertheless in a wretched plight. Their economic situation has been described as desperate. There is no place in the Bolshevik scheme of things for a middle, a mercantile class, to which the bulk of the Jews of Russia belonged. Besides this, the Soviet Government is continually placing obstacles in the path of Jewish educational and spiritual effort, notably against Hebrew education, the use of the Hebrew tongue, and the Zionist movement. It has been stated that while there is a comparatively small number of the younger Jews who are adapting themselves to the new order, the great mass of the Jews are longing for a way out of a life for which they are totally unfitted, their only hope lying in a gradual restoration of normal economic life under a stable democratic government recognized by the other civilized governments of the world.

3. LITHUANIA

The Jews of Lithuania would be in a position of comparative ease and comfort, were it not for the recent war between Russia and Poland and the present difficulties which have resulted from the capture of Vilna by a Polish army and which are now the subject of consideration by the League of Nations Council.

The Jews co-operated cordially with other elements in the struggle for the independence of Lithuania, and though it is not unnatural that in this as in other parts of the former

Russian Empire traces of anti-Semitism should survive, it is authoritatively stated by the representatives of the Jews that the general population cherishes nothing but good-will towards the Jews. A ministry has been established for the purpose of looking after Jewish educational and cultural interests.

The economic situation of the Jews has been considerably altered by the war. While a considerable part of them were formerly engaged in mercantile pursuits, a large number followed industrial and professional callings. The war, with the attendant uprooting of many Jews from their homes, has greatly altered the situation, and has thrown most of the Jews into mercantile lines. Active measures are being taken to restore industry and to assist professional men to reestablish themselves.

4. THE UKRAINE

There are insistent reports of the continuation of anarchy in the Ukraine. Conditions are such as to make it extremely difficult to secure much reliable information. The Jewish community of America has had tragic evidence in the murder of the two martyrs, Israel Friedlaender and Bernard Cantor, the former a member of the Committee. At the present moment there does not seem to be any indication that conditions are likely to improve in the near future, and the only hope for the restoration of order and civilized life in South-western Russia lies in the setting up of a constitutional government, amenable to the influence of the public opinion of the rest of the world.

On November 24, 1919, there was held in New York City a mass-meeting to protest against the maltreatment of the Jews of the Ukraine. Similar mass-meetings were held on various dates in other parts of the country. A combined delegation, representing the various Jewish communities and led by the President of your Committee, thereupon waited upon the Hon. Robert Lansing, then Secretary of State, and presented to him such information as had been received respecting the pogroms, together with a petition praying that our government use its good offices on behalf of the Jews of that region. Mr. Lansing replied that while the United States Government viewed with horror the outrages complained of, it was not then in position to take any official action because of the complete absence of diplomatic relations with any of the various political and military groups which were then struggling for supremacy in the Ukraine. Mr. Lansing, however, promised to take under advisement the suggestion that the United States request Great Britain, France, and Italy to join with it in sending an International Military Commission to the Ukraine to follow the various military movements there, thus affording opportunities to bring about a cessation of the prevailing atrocities. In the meantime he gave his approval to the sending of a Commission of Jews into the Ukraine to acquaint themselves with conditions there, and to extend relief to the victims of the massacres and to those suffering from famine and disease with the understanding that they would serve at their own risk and could expect no protection from our Government. Subsequently, the President of your Committee took occasion to bring these conditions to the attention of the Hon. Bainbridge Colby, Mr. Lansing's successor.

5. HUNGARY

Conditions in Hungary are unspeakably shocking. During the greater part of several centuries the Jews of that country were practically free from the discrimination from which their brethren suffered in Roumania and Russia. During the past year, however, conditions have changed to such an extent that to-day the Jews of Hungary are in a most unfortunate plight. There have been frequent outbreaks conducted by sections of what is termed the White Army, which have resulted in the murder of many Jews, in the looting of their property, and in the perpetration of the most horrible indignities. They have been humiliated and libelled, the newspapers have sought to make them responsible as a body for the actions of Bela Kun and his associates, with the result that conditions have become intolerable and the Jews have been practically driven to despair.

Your Committee has called these conditions to the attention of our Government with the suggestion that it use its good offices to bring about a cessation of these indignities and excesses. In reply the State Department gave assurance that the matter would be referred to its representatives abroad, as in fact was done.

In the early part of the present year, your Committee was approached by Mr. John Pelenyi, a delegate of the Hungarian Unitarian churches, who exhibited documents showing that there had recently been serious interference with the freedom of worship in parts of Hungary then under the military occupation of Roumanian, Czech, and Serbian troops. This condition had already been called to the attention of the British Government by an interdenominational committee of prominent English clergymen and laymen, had been made the subject of debate in the House of Lords, of a memorial to our Government by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and of a Memorial to the Supreme Council of the Allied and Associated Powers by the General Presbyterian Alliance, a Federation of the Presbyterian Churches of the world. Mr. Pelenyi asked that the American Jewish Committee endorse the Memorial of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, and after due consideration your Committee resolved to unite in the petition of that body to our Government, which it did, praying that the representatives of the United States in the Supreme Council be instructed to intervene, with a view to safeguarding the religious liberty of all creeds in Hungary. Mr. Polk, as Acting Secretary of State, on March 20, 1920, replied that appropriate instructions had been sent on that subject to the Ambassador of the United States in Paris.

At the request of his family resident here, representations were also made to the Department of State concerning the arrest of Chief Rabbi Löw of Szegedin, on the charge of treason, because he had taken exception to the massacre of Jews in Hungary. Shortly thereafter he was released from imprisonment.

6. ROUMANIA

The condition of our coreligionists in Roumania has greatly improved and according to the most recent reports is considerably better than it has been since the Treaty of Berlin. This improvement has come as part of the program of a more enlightened governmental policy following closely upon the territorial enlargement of Roumania, which now has a Jewish population of about one million. Discriminatory laws and regulations have been abolished in harmony with the terms of the treaty with the Allied and Associated Powers, and in this respect Roumania is rapidly taking its place beside the great liberal nations of the West.

In August last, the crown prince of Roumania visited New York, and an opportunity was given to representatives of your Committee to confer with him and with Mr. Nicolas Filodor, the representative of the Roumanian Foreign Office. He is officially the Roumanian Minister to Greece, but was assigned to accompany the crown prince on his tour around the world. The crown prince stated that all residents of Roumania would be treated equally irrespective of race or religion. Mr. Filodor gave every assurance that whatever may have been the policy of Roumania in the past, it had accepted whole-heartedly the Minority Treaty; that the Roumanian Parliament, which would convene shortly, would unquestionably ratify it, and that the Government would carry into execution in good faith all of its provisions. He called attention to the fact that since the signing of the Treaty a good understanding had been arrived at between the Roumanian Jews and their other fellow-citizens and that pogroms were unknown in Roumania. Reference was made by your representatives to the fact that during the war, in consequence of mistakes of fact, a considerable number of Jews had been court-martialed, some of them sentenced to death and others imprisoned for long terms; that some of these cases had been reviewed, with the result that there have been commutations and reductions in the sentences pronounced, and in other cases there had been acquittals after a retrial; that although the king of Roumania had recently issued a humane proclamation of amnesty to political offenders, it nevertheless contained exceptions that might be interpreted as having special reference to the Jews, and the hope was expressed that at this time further grace might be extended to all who had not actually been guilty of treason. Mr. Filodor declared this request to be in harmony with the policy of his Government and was confident that action of the character indicated would be soon taken.

7. PALESTINE

On April 25, 1920, the political status of Palestine was definitely settled at a conference of the Allied Powers at San Remo, Italy. It was then announced that Great Britain would be appointed the mandatary over Palestine. Although the terms of the mandate have not yet been laid down by the League of Nations, the draft treaty with Turkey definitely states that the mandatary "will be responsible for putting into effect the declaration originally made on November 2, 1917, by the British Government and adopted by the other Allied Powers in favor of the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

There are indications that political conditions in Palestine are rapidly improving. Now that its status has been decided, there is no doubt that racial antagonisms will be soon allayed or disappear altogether and that the progress of Palestine towards the goal set by the Powers will be orderly, well-planned, and permanent. As stated in its resolution of April 28, 1918, this Committee stands ready to aid in the realization of this aim and to co-operate with those who, attracted by religious or historic associations, shall seek to establish in Palestine a center for Judaism, for the stimulation of our faith, for the pursuit and development of literature, science, and art in a Jewish environment, and for the rehabilitation of the land.

8. THE JEWS OF YEMEN

Following representations made by your Committee, the Joint Distribution Committee has agreed to pay out of its funds the sum of $5,000 to the Jewish National Fund for the benefit of the Jews of Yemen and of Moroccan Jewish Refugees in Palestine.

9. RELIEF OF MENDEL BEILIS

During the past year your Committee learned that Mendel Beilis, the innocent victim of the notorious ritual murder accusation in Kiev, Russia, in 1913, was living with his family in Palestine, whither he had gone after his acquittal, in a condition of destitution. Your Committee, having signified its willingness at that time to join other Jewish organizations in aiding Beilis materially, decided to donate the sum of $5,000 toward his support. A draft for this amount was sent to the manager of the Anglo-Palestine Bank who was requested to use it in a manner which will enable Beilis to become self-supporting.

10. JEWISH ORPHAN ASYLUM, SOFIA, BULGARIA

Your Committee has completely discharged the obligation undertaken by it in 1914, when it agreed to make a contribution of $2,500, in five annual instalments towards the maintenance of the Jewish Orphan Asylum, Queen Elenore at Sophia, Bulgaria, an institution for Jewish war orphans. Your Committee has appealed to the Joint Distribution Committee to consider extending further support to this worthy institution.

C. DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

1. OFFICE OF JEWISH WAR RECORDS

The work of collecting the records of the war service of American Jews, which the Committee has been prosecuting with the co-operation of the Jewish Welfare Board, was considerably advanced during the past year. Plans have been adopted for the conclusion of this effort by the first of February next when it is contemplated that a comprehensive report based upon the information secured up to that time will be prepared and all the original data will be confided to the custody of the American Jewish Historical Society. Mr. Julian Leavitt, the Director of the Office of Jewish War Records of the Committee, will present a detailed report of the status of the work of that office.

2. ANTI-JEWISH DISCRIMINATION

As in the past few years, the attention of your Committee has been drawn to several instances of anti-Jewish discrimination on the part of public and quasi-public bodies. Such matters have been uniformly investigated and, wherever such action appeared desirable, called to the attention of the proper authorities. Your Committee is pleased to report that in all such instances during the past year proper action was taken by such authorities to correct the abuses complained of and to avert the recurrence of similar discrimination.

3. IMMIGRATION

Your Committee was represented at the National Conference on Immigration held in the city of New York on April 7, 1920, under the auspices of the Inter-Racial Council, convened "for the purpose of considering the various phases of immigration, the present laws applicable thereto, and the desirability of establishing a policy that will redound alike to the welfare of the country and of the immigrant who seeks to make his home here." This Conference adopted a series of resolutions containing suggestions for legislation on the subjects of the assimilation, the admission, the stabilization, and the naturalization of immigrants. These resolutions have been presented to the Committees on Immigration of the Senate and of the House of Representatives. Copies thereof have been sent to all the members of the Committee for their information.

Your President appeared before the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization in May last, for the purpose of discussing the essentials of a sound immigration policy on the lines of these resolutions and a protracted hearing followed. No action has thus far been taken by Congress on the subject. There are, however, indications that the opponents of a liberal policy will at the coming session make a determined effort to suspend immigration for a term of years or to enact a series of restrictive measures. As in the past, this Committee will continue to advocate the retention of the humane system that has contributed greatly to the development of our country and has afforded an opportunity for worthy men and women to enjoy the blessings of freedom.

4. THE FALASHAS

Shortly after our Thirteenth Annual Meeting last November, Doctor Jacques Faitlovitch left the United States for Abyssinia for the purpose of prosecuting there, under the auspices of this Committee, the work of establishing a system of Jewish and secular education among the Falashas, the Jews of that country. We have been informed by Doctor Faitlovitch that he has secured promises of co-operation and assistance from the Italian Government and that he hoped to enlist the sympathetic aid of the Abyssinian authorities. It will be his aim, with the aid of several natives who have received European education, to revive among the Falashas a knowledge of the traditions and observances of Judaism, and to help the Falashas to improve their material and economic conditions.

Your Committee has taken steps to secure the co-operation of other Jewish organizations in this country.

5. THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

On May 30-31, last, The American Jewish Congress with which your Committee was affiliated held its final session. A detailed report of the work of the Congress delegation to the Peace Conference was presented by Mr. Marshall and was accepted by the Congress. It has been published by that organization. After the completion of other necessary business, the Congress was adjourned sine die, in accordance with the agreement on the basis of which it was called.

6. THE AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK

The American Jewish Year Book for 5681, the 22nd volume of that publication, was, like previous issues since 5669, prepared in the office of your Committee, under the direction of the Assistant Secretary. The current volume contains articles on Jewish Social Research in the United States, by Mr. Hyman Kaplan, Assistant Executive Director of the Bureau of Jewish Social Research; the Jews of Alsace-Lorraine by M. Sylvain Halff of Paris; the Falashas by Doctor Jacques Faitlovitch; and the Peace Conference and Rights of Minorities, a compilation of excerpts from the various treaties dealing with the protection of the rights of racial, religious and linguistic minorities in the countries of Eastern Europe. The Year Book contains also, in the section on Jewish Statistics, new estimates of the Jewish population of the various countries in the world, prepared by the Bureau of Jewish Social Research. This is probably the first attempt to cast up the figures of Jewish population as affected by the recent changes in Europe. These figures are full of significance. Whereas, before 1918, almost one-half of the Jews of the world were under the domination of the despotism of the czars, and the great Russian-Jewish question loomed so large that it eclipsed all others in the eyes of the Jewries of other countries, we are to-day compelled to distribute our attention among the Jewish questions of Poland, Ukrainia, Czecho-Slovakia, Lithuania, Hungary, Roumania, and other countries. The partition of the great Russian-Jewish community has rendered the Jewry of the United States practically the largest in the world. The Bureau of Jewish Social Research also prepared for the Year Book tables showing the professional tendencies of Jewish students in American colleges and universities.

As usual, the Year Book contains useful calendars, directories, and lists, and the Thirteenth Annual Report of the American Jewish Committee.

Loeb, Chicago, Henry Sachs, Colorado Springs, Horace Stern, Philadelphia, Oscar S. Straus, New York, Lewis Strauss, Jr., New York.

Your Executive Committee has reached the conclusion that the present methods of electing members to the General Committee are no longer suited to our type of organization. It believes that in view of the fact that the Committee now has a considerable body of contributors, whose numbers are steadily increasing, these persons with the representatives of national organizations actually form the constituency of the organization and should have a voice in selecting members to the General Committee, whenever vacancies occur or terms expire. It is suggested that your Committee be empowered to amend the By-laws with a view to bringing about this change.

3. FINANCES

THE "PROTOCOLS," BOLSHEVISM, AND THE JEWS

AN ADDRESS TO THEIR FELLOW-CITIZENS BY AMERICAN JEWISH ORGANIZATIONS, PUBLISHED
DECEMBER 1, 1920

TO OUR FELLOW CITIZENS:

During the war, by secret agencies, a document variously called "The Procotols of the Elders of Zion," "The Protocols of the Meetings of the Zionist Men of Wisdom," and "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion," was clandestinely circulated, in typewritten form, among public officials and carefully selected civilians, for the purpose of giving rise to the belief that the Jews, in conjunction with Freemasons, had been for centuries engaged in a conspiracy to produce revolution and anarchy, by means of which they hoped to obtain the control of the world by the establishment of some sort of despotic rule. Some months ago this document was published in England. More recently it has appeared in print in the United States, and thousands of copies have been circulated with an air of mystery among legislators, journalists, clergymen and teachers, members of clubs, and indiscriminately to the general public. The London Morning Post has given out a series of articles as a commentary upon The Protocols, in which the charge of an unholy conspiracy between Jews and Freemasons is elaborated, and Bolshevism is characterized as a movement of, for, and by the Jews, and is declared to be a fulfilment of The Protocols. These articles, whose authorship is not disclosed, have now appeared in book form under the title "The Cause of World Unrest." During the past six months there have been sent forth weekly in Henry Ford's organ, The Dearborn Independent, attacks of extraordinary virulence upon the Jews. These assaults upon the honor of the Jewish people are all founded on The Protocols and on the discredited literature of Russian and German anti-Semitism, inspired by the minions of autocracy. Parrot-like they repeat the abominable charges that can only appeal to the credulity of a stunted intelligence—charges long since conceded to be unfounded by all fair-minded men. Ford is employing his great wealth in scattering broadcast his fulminations, regardless of consequences.

When the Jews of the United States first learned of these malevolent prints, they deemed it beneath their dignity to take notice of them because they regarded them as a mere recrudescence of medieval bigotry and stupidity showing upon their face their utter worthlessness. These publications have, however, been put in circulation to such an extent that it is believed that the time has come, humiliating though it be to them, for the Jews to make answer to these libels and to the unworthy insinuations and innuendoes that have been whispered against them.

Speaking as representatives of the Jewish people, familiar with the history of Judaism in its various phases and with the movements, past and present, in Jewish life, we say with all solemnity:

(1) The Protocols are a base forgery. There has never been an organization of Jews known as The Elders of Zion, or The Zionist Men of Wisdom, or The Wise Men of Zion, or bearing any other similar name. There has never existed a secret or other Jewish body organized for any purpose such as that implied in The Protocols. The Jewish people have never dreamed of a Jewish dictatorship, of a destruction of religion, of an interference with industrial prosperity, or of an overthrow of civilization. The Jews have never conspired with the Freemasons, or with any other body, for any purpose.

From the time of the destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem by Titus, the Jews have had no political state. For centuries they were forced to wander from land to land, to flee for refuge wherever they might find it against bitter persecution. They were pent up in ghettos, were deprived of even the shadow of civil or political rights, and were made the objects of every possible form of discrimination. It is little more than fifty years since the Jews of Western Europe became politically emancipated. Until the outbreak of the World War the Jews of Eastern Europe, constituting a majority of all of the Jews of the world, were not even permitted to exercise the rights of citizenship in lands where they and their ancestors had dwelt for generations. The great mass of the Jews were hampered in every way in their efforts to earn a livelihood. Far from desiring to govern the world, they were content with the opportunity to live. Numerically they constitute less than one per cent of the population of the earth; and more than one-half of them are on the verge of starvation. The suggestion that, in their feebleness, they have been planning in secret conclave to seize absolute power and to dominate the ninety-nine per cent of non-Jews upon the globe is a ridiculous invention than which even madness can conjure nothing more preposterous.

Where is the habitat of these so-called Elders of Zion, by whatever name they may be called? Who are these hidden sages? Whence do they come? What is the nature of their organization? The distributors of The Protocols are silent on that subject. Whence come these pretended Protocols? There have been various versions. One Serge Nilus, of whose identity little is known, a Russian mystic and an ardent supporter of Czarism, claims to have received them in Russia, in 1901, in manuscript form, from a Russian office-holder, who stated that the manuscript had been originally obtained by a lady, whose name is not given, and who, he said, obtained them in a mysterious way. In what language they were written is not stated. Where that manuscript now is does not appear. Nilus asserts that he submitted The Protocols to one of the Russian grand dukes, who, after examination, returned them with the despairing message: "Too late." Apparently there was no room for them in the Russian archives, and they suggested no task for the Czar's ubiquitous police to perform. In 1905, Nilus published at Tsarskoye Selo a second edition of a mystical book entitled "The Great in the Little," the first edition having been published in 1901. Into this later edition he incorporated for the first time The Protocols, which he claimed to have had in his possession for four years. In January, 1917, he published another book under the title "It is Near, at the Door," purporting to foretell "the coming of the Anti-Christ and the Kingdom of the Devil on Earth." In this book he announces that he had only then learned authoritatively from Jewish sources (what they were is not explained) that these Protocols were nothing other than a strategic plan for the conquest of the world, of putting it under the yoke of Israel, "the struggler-against-God," a plan worked out by the leaders of the Jewish people during the many centuries of their dispersion, and finally presented to the Council of Elders by the Prince of Exile, Theodor Herzl, at the time of the first Zionist Congress summoned by him at Basle in August, 1897. He declared that The Protocols were signed by the Zionist representatives of the thirty-third degree of initiation; that they were secretly removed from the complete file of Protocols that pertained to the first Zionist Congress; that they were taken from the secret vaults at the main Zionist office, which, it is said, "at present is located in French territory."

The Protocols as published bear no signatures. The identity of the Zionist representatives by whom they are claimed to have been signed is left untold. The location of the main Zionist office and of the secret vaults from which The Protocols were secretly removed remains a secret. It is, however, a matter of history that the first Zionist Congress was publicly held by Jews who came from various parts of Europe for the purpose of considering the misery of their brethren in Eastern Europe and of enabling them to find shelter in the Holy Land. Theodor Herzl was a distinguished journalist, a man of true nobility of character. He presided at the Congress, all of whose deliberations were held in the light of day. The insinuation that there was a thirty-third, or any other, degree of initiation in this organization is merely a malicious effort to bring the Jews into parallelism with the Freemasons and thus to subject them to all the fanciful and fantastic charges that have from time to time been laid at the door of Freemasonry, oblivious of the fact that fifteen Presidents of the United States, including Washington, and many of the leading statesmen of Europe and America, have been members of that order.

Nilus and his associates belonged to the Russian bureaucracy. In 1905, through the Black Hundreds, that body sought in every way to crush the Jews and to prevent the liberalization of the government. The time was propitious for the perpetration of a political forgery by a government that habitually resorted to the employment of agents provocateurs, a government which only a few years later, against the protest of the enlightened clergy of the world, ineffectually sought to convict Mendel Beilis on the charge of ritual murder. It is significant that one of his prosecutors has been active in distributing manuscript copies of The Protocols throughout the United States.

Irrespective of this history, bristling with suspicion, an analysis of The Protocols shows that on their face they are a fabrication and that they must have emanated from the bitter opponents of democracy. They are replete with cynical references to the French Revolution, and to the conceptions of liberty, equality, and fraternity. They uphold privilege and autocracy. They belittle education. They condemn religious liberty. They assert that political freedom is an idea and not a fact, and that the doctrine that a government is nothing but a steward of the people is a mere phrase. These are the very doctrines that one would expect from the protagonists of autocracy. Nothing can be more foreign to Jewish thought and aspiration than these brutal theories of reaction. That the Jews, whose very life has been a prayer for the blessings of liberty and equality, should hold them in contempt is unthinkable.

The document throughout is farcical in its absurdities. In the Russian original there is a passage, significantly omitted from the translation, to the effect that the English are the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel, and the British Government is violently attacked for its liberalism. If climax there be to all this folly, it lies in the idea set forth in The Protocols that "the world ruler is to spring from the dynastic roots of King David" and that "the King of Israel will become the real Pope of the Universe and the Patriarch of the International Church," whatever that may mean.

It is needless, however, to elaborate, when one considers that the editor of the London Morning Post, in his introduction to "The Cause of the World Unrest," himself doubts the genuineness of The Protocols, and that the anonymous author of that book, after using them as his text, is unable to give them any higher certificate than that they may or may not be genuine. Indeed, he goes so far as to say:

"We have said that this document flashes a blaze of light, and so it does, but whether this document is genuine or not, whether the blaze of light is true or false, can only be judged by internal evidence and probabilities. We may say at once that Nilus advances nothing in the nature of real evidence to prove the document, and that his account of how it came into his hands consists of assertion only, without evidence to support it."

And yet a document, thus discredited by its sponsors, is made the basis of an indictment against an entire people.

(2) The contention that the genuineness of The Protocols is established by the outbreak of Bolshevism in Russia twelve years after their publication, and that Bolshevism is a Jewish movement, is absurd in theory and absolutely untrue in fact. As well might it be said that a forged deed is genuine because twenty years after its date a relative of the person whose name is forged is falsely charged with being a disturber of the peace.

To say that the Jews are responsible for Bolshevism is a deliberate falsehood. The originators of Bolshevism were exclusively non-Jews. While it is true that there are Jews among the Bolsheviks, notably Trotsky, they represent a small fraction of the Jews and of the followers of Bolshevism. Lenine, who belonged to the Russian aristocracy and has not a drop of Jewish blood in his veins, was the creator as he has been the motive power of the Soviets. Tchicherin, who has conducted their foreign affairs, Bucharin, Krassin, and Kalinin, all non-Jews, are, with Lenine, the brains of the Communist Party.

The Bolshevik cabinet, known as the People's Commissars, consists of twenty members, of whom Trotsky and Svërdlov are the only Jews, and they are Jews merely by birth. Of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, including Trotsky, there are four Jews out of thirteen. The so-called Extraordinary Commission, whose function it is to suppress opposition to the Bolshevik régime from within, is directed by a triumvirate consisting of a Pole and two Letts, none of whom is of Jewish origin. Although Trotsky is the head of the War Department, his General Staff is composed exclusively of non-Jews.

In "The Cause of World Unrest" a list of fifty names is given, most of whom are classified as Jews and Bolsheviks, in order to establish the thesis that "nearly all of the Bolshevik leaders are Jews." An examination of the list shows that ten of the Jews included in the list are the leaders of the anti-Bolshevik movement in Russia; that a number of those who are classified in the list as Jews are not Jews at all; that a large proportion of those classified as Jews are men who are so obscure and hold positions so inconspicuous that whether or not they are Jews is not only uncertain but unimportant. They are certainly not leaders.

On the other hand, the leaders of the Mensheviks, who are the sworn foes of Bolshevism, are to a large extent Jews.

Among the chiefs of the Constitutional Democratic Party of Russia, who are strongly opposed to the Soviets, are Vinaver, Sliosberg, Pasmanik, Kaminka, Landau, and Friedman, all prominent Jews. Among the leaders of the People's Socialist, the Socialist Revolutionary, and the Menshevik section of the Social Democratic parties, bitter opponents of the Bolsheviks, are a large number of Jews. The leading anti-Bolshevist newspapers, which of necessity are published outside of Russia, have Jews upon their editorial staffs. An overwhelming majority of Russian Jews have been ruined by the coercive measures of the Soviets. They have submitted to the confiscation of their property and are undergoing unspeakable hardships. The Orthodox Jews, whose numbers preponderate, remaining loyal to the faith of their fathers, regard the Bolsheviks as the enemies of all religion, and, therefore, hold the doctrines of Bolshevism in abhorrence. With comparatively few exceptions, the Jews are looked upon by the Bolsheviks as belonging to the hated bourgeoisie and as favoring capitalism. The Zionists, who constitute a numerous and important element of the Jews of Russia, have been denounced by the Soviets as counter-revolutionary, and many of them have been cast into prison and threatened with death—Zionists, we repeat, who are the followers of Herzl.

If the Jews are to be condemned because of a Trotsky, who has never in the slightest degree concerned himself with Judaism or the welfare of the Jews, then there is not a people that has ever lived that might not with equal right be condemned because in its membership there were men who are alleged to have advocated hateful doctrines. The Jew has traditionally stood for religion, law, order, the family, and the right of property. It is, therefore, the height of cruelty to charge him with responsibility for Bolshevism, when its doctrines, should they prevail, would inevitably lead to the destruction of Judaism. It is especially a brutal charge when one considers all that the Jew has suffered from the oppressive and discriminatory laws of Russian autocracy and from its effort to suppress every aspiration that the Jew had for freedom. It is a great tribute to the patriotism of the Russian Jews that, in spite of the indignities that they had to undergo, hundreds of thousands of them fought under the banner of the Czar, loyally and gallantly, and in large numbers laid down their lives in the Allied cause. The rosters of the army and navy of the United States contain the names of tens of thousands of Jews born in Russia who served so faithfully under our colors that they gained the unqualified approval of their officers, and proportionately many of them were awarded decorations of honor by a grateful country.

We have refrained from commenting on the libels contained in The Dearborn Independent. Ford, in the fulness of his knowledge, unqualifiedly declares The Protocols to be genuine, and argues that practically every Jew is a Bolshevik. We have dealt sufficiently with both of these falsehoods. It is useless in a serious document to analyze the puerile and venomous drivel that he has derived from the concoctions of professional agitators. He is merely a dupe.

What is the motive of those who have set in motion this new onslaught of anti-Semitism? It is the motive that again and again has actuated autocracy and its adroit supporters—that of seeking a scapegoat for their own sins, so that they may be enabled under the cover of a false issue to deceive the public.

It is an attempt to drive into the solidarity of the citizenry of our country that has been its pride and its strength the wedge of discord, by arousing suspicion and inciting overt acts not only against those of Jewish origin but also against Freemasons, in the hope of discrediting free government in the eyes of the European masses and thus facilitate the restoration of absolutism in government.

The Protocols were manufactured in Russia under the bureaucracy, and the ammunition with which the campaign is conducted has been furnished out of the arsenal of imperialistic Germany and by those who are seeking to restore the Hapsburgs, the Hohenzollerns, and the Romanoffs on their former thrones. Ancient hatred and unreasoning prejudice and a failure to understand and know what the Jew really is, are likewise responsible for the readiness with which these falsehoods have been accepted by those who are ever willing to believe evil of their fellow-men.

We have an abiding confidence in the spirit of justice and fairness that permeates the true American, and we are satisfied that our fellow-citizens will not permit the campaign of slander and libel that has been launched against us to go unreprieved. There is enough for all of us to do in the great task of building up our common country and of developing the principles on which it is founded. Let not hatred and misunderstanding arise where peace and harmony, unity and brotherliness, are required to perpetuate all that America represents and to enable all men to know that within her wide boundaries there is no room for injustice and intolerance.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA

The Annual Meeting of the Jewish Publication Society of America was held on Sunday evening, March 27, 1921, at the Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, Philadelphia, Pa. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rabbi Henry W. Ettelson, of Philadelphia. The President of the Society, Mr. Simon Miller, acted as Chairman, and Mr. I. George Dobseva, of Philadelphia, as Secretary.

The President read the following report of the Society's activities:

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The dominant note of all our annual meetings has been one of pardonable pride in achievement in the past and hope for the future, always believing that American Jewry would abundantly support our efforts. The time has come when we must face conditions as they are; not, Micawber-like, "wait for something to turn up." Like all other ventures, the Society has undergone severe stress since the beginning of the great upheaval which rocked the foundations of all civilization. For thirty-three years we have been distributing books "giving instructions in the principles of the Jewish religion and in Jewish history and literature." During all this period the membership dues did not pay the cost of publication. We were continually running behind in our finances. This was, as can be readily judged, greatly exaggerated as a result of the war, during which conditions became more and more acute. Believing that our public-spirited Jews were burdened by the cry for material relief, we did not feel justified in an appeal for funds to meet our growing deficit. We therefore entered the years 1919 and 1920 heavily burdened with debts which we could not meet either by receipts from members nor from sales of books. In spite of all these difficulties the Society felt that it could not be false to its mission, but must continue true to its high ideals and purposes and look to American Israel to come to its aid.

We have grown in numbers. A most conservative count places our membership at seventeen thousand, the largest in the history of the Society. Our dues receipts amounted to over $81,000; the sales of our books, which we practically discontinued in July, 1920, were mounting by leaps and bounds. But the cost of paper, printing and binding, the running expense, the rather burdensome outlay for salesmen, who, until other means are found, are our propagandists, grew ever higher. Then the fact that we were selling books on credit, the only way they can be sold extensively to a public that has grown accustomed to buying books on the "club plan," and we had not the necessary capital to finance it, has left us very poor indeed. This plea of not having sufficient funds to carry on the intellectual and spiritual work of our community is now heard from practically all institutions whose special purpose is to train teachers and educate our people. That organizations functioning for the good of all should show a deficit is frequently an indication of work done beyond their resources, and a community alive to this will not long deny such institutions the funds they need.

The Society cannot possibly continue to do this work unless it has the moral and financial support of the community. The needs of a Jewish community numbering over four million cannot be met on nor can good work be done on a hand-to-mouth basis of years ago. To this end we have sent out an appeal to the leaders of Jewish thought and action throughout America asking them to help raise a sustaining fund of $200,000. Philadelphia, the home city, has with little effort nearly secured its quota, and we now look forward to New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Newark, Boston, Baltimore, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Detroit, which contain 72 per cent of the Jewish population, to meet their quotas. Cities having only a thousand or more Jewish inhabitants will be organized, while the individuals scattered throughout the country who have in any way manifested an interest in Jewish literature will be reached as well. Of necessity, the appeal can be made only to the cultured in our community, and if they fail us, to whom else may we appeal and with what prospect of success?

In taking stock, we must not merely look at the financial or the physical side of our activities. A survey of the spiritual aspects of our work shows that we have published about one hundred and twenty books and distributed about one and three-quarter millions of copies of our publications. Without these books it is fair to assume that American Israel would not have been prepared to realize its duties in the great crisis that is affecting our brothers abroad, and for that matter comprehend our needs at home. It is only through a knowledge of the Jewish past that it is given to any Jew to be able to understand the present needs and the future outlook of our people.

We have made it possible for the Jews of America to read Jewish Books in English and we have encouraged scholars to write these books. Even a master like Zangwill, speaking of his own indebtedness to the Society, said that "Without its stimulation, I might never have written my 'Children of the Ghetto.'" It was the Society that introduced to American Israel the works of Graetz, Schechter, Dubnow, Karpeles, Jacobs, Abrahams, Peretz, Margolis, Ginzberg, Lazarus and Steinberg. To have brought out their writings in English garb would in itself have been a great accomplishment. But it was also this Society that projected and carried out to a successful conclusion the New Translation of the Bible, a version which is more and more being recognized as the best English Translation, not only by Jews but by Christians as well. The Voice, an official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, published only the other day the following remarks regarding our Bible:

"The Hebrew Bible has never been translated officially by the Jews, and Hebrew, being a picture language, contains thousands of words that only the Hebrew-born can see. It is a matter of a hundred times more importance than the publicity it has received would indicate, that for the first time Jewish scholars have gotten together and have rendered the Hebrew Bible into luminous and beautiful English, and after twenty-five years of work upon it, the Jewish Publication Society of America has published 'The Holy Scriptures.' We have read the volume through during the year, pen in hand to mark the striking improvements, and we soon found that we have to 'mark it all up.' The book can be secured through our Methodist Book Concern, and any preacher who reads it will be lastingly grateful to us for calling his attention to it. It follows the style of the King James version as revised by the American revisors, puts it in more correct and up-to-date English and fathoms the meaning of numerous Hebraeisms which were 'all Greek' to the Gentile translators."

Thus we are carrying on the mission of Israel in bringing the Word not only to the Jew, but to the Gentile as well. Add to this the series of works projected—the Jewish Classics Series, consisting of at least twenty-five volumes of text and translation, the Jewish Commentary on the Bible, in perhaps thirty volumes, and the establishment of a Hebrew Press—the importance of the society as a spiritual and intellectual force in the life of our people becomes manifest. To achieve all these we must have Jewry's financial as well as moral support.

This occasion must not pass without some expression of our profound grief in the loss of three of our staunchest supporters and co-workers.

Professor Israel Friedlaender died a martyr in the service of the Jewish people. The society, in common with all the Jews of this country and of the world has suffered a grievous loss. To us there is an especial sense of personal bereavement. We miss him not only as a valued colleague, but a beloved friend. The gifts of ripe scholarship, cultivated taste, good judgment and human sympathy with which Professor Friedlaender was so richly endowed made him particularly helpful in our work and endeared him to all of us. His personal contributions to the publications of our society—the three volumes of Dubnow's "History of the Jews of Russia and Poland," which he not only translated but edited, and for which he prepared an exhaustive index—give but a slight suggestion of our indebtedness to his self-sacrificing labors.

He had undertaken to write for the society a popular Jewish history and a volume on "The People in Bible Times," work upon which was interrupted in order that the true facts of Russo-Polish Jewish history might be laid before the conscience of the world at a time when it was supremely necessary for the truth to be known of all men.

He served with distinction on many of the important sub-committees in charge of the various departments of our work, and was, in addition, a member of the Jewish Classics Committee, of the Committee on Bible Commentaries, and of the Editorial Committee of the American Jewish Year Book, and for one year, in the stead of Professor Schechter, he served on the Board of Editors of the Society's New Translation of the Bible. He had also undertaken work on certain texts and translations for the classics series. We feel that his services in these fields of education, literature and public welfare will not be the least esteemed among the many achievements for which Jewish history will hold his memory in love and reverence.

As a testimonial to his memory, the society proposes to issue a memorial volume containing a collection of hitherto unpublished essays on miscellaneous topics of Jewish interest.

In the passing away of Mr. Schiff, Israel lost one of its noblest representatives. Through his philanthropies he reached every heart. His name was a household word in every Jewish family, irrespective of religious or political opinion. His philanthropies extended to every human effort, while his sagacity was of great service in every Jewish cause. The society in particular will forever remember his munificence. It was manifested at the very beginning when he helped to establish our Permanent Fund, and more particularly so when in 1914, while in Algiers, he remembered the society and the work it was doing by sending a check for $50,000 to help defray the cost of publishing the Bible. Later he made contributions of $50,000 to help in the publication of the Jewish classics and, subsequently, he joined several others in the establishment of the Hebrew Press. His interests in Jewish culture and literature manifested themselves not only in giving of his means, but equally in a sympathetic and statesmanlike grasp of its significance to the Jew. In his veins coursed the blood of true Jewish nobility.

To-night we also mourn the passing away of Professor Abram S. Isaacs, whose books published by the society have been perused with delight and will continue to be read by the younger generations to come. His beautiful stories were an inspiration to old and young alike, and his loss will particularly be felt by the society. Fortunately, we have secured a legacy in the form of a fine collection of stories and poems entitled "School Days in Our Home Town," which will be published at an early date.

Since March 1, 1920, the society has issued Dr. Israel Abrahams' volume entitled "By-Paths in Hebraic Bookland." This book was favorably received by the press and our membership. Its wide range of topics made it delightful reading to all those who are interested in general literature, as well as in some of the special portraits treated. This was followed by a little volume from the pen of Mrs. E. E. Levinger, entitled "Playmates in Egypt," containing a number of short stories, each one dealing with some phase of Jewish history and centering around some Jewish occasion or festival. It was not only welcomed by the English-reading public, but requests have come from abroad for translation into foreign languages.

Volume 22 of the Year Book was published in the Fall of 1920, and its editor, Mr. Harry Schneiderman, is to be congratulated for his skill in maintaining the high standard of the previous editions. In this volume was published an article on the progress of Jewish social research in the United States, tracing the history of attempts at co-ordination among the societies, and touching upon the problems arising in American Jewish communities. Captain M. Sylvain Holf, who had contributed such a brilliant article in a previous issue of the Year Book on the participation of French Jews in the Great War, writes in his characteristic fashion of the life of the Jews of Alsace-Lorraine from the time of their severance from France until their restoration. The article is replete with important information. Dr. Jacques Faitlovitch, the well-known traveler and author, an untiring and devoted friend of the Falashas, contributed a concise sketch of the life and history of this isolated group of Jews living in the mountains of Abyssinia.

The international character of the volume was again maintained not only through the list of Leading Events arranged according to countries and by the publication of treaties with Germany and Poland, bearing upon the rights of minorities, and similar clauses from the treaties with Austria, Jugoslavia, Czecho-Slovakia, Bulgaria and Rumania. Extracts are also given from the treaties with Greece and Hungary and Turkey, particularly as they pertain to the disposition of Palestine and the rights of racial, linguistic and religious minorities in Turkey, as it will be constituted.

With the publication of the third volume of the "History of the Jews in Russia and Poland," an important contribution to Jewish history came to completion. In addition to the text, an extensive bibliography and an index to the entire work are given. In the bibliography an enormous amount of material has been collected, and it is arranged in such a way as to enable the reader to ascertain the sources upon which the author drew. The index was prepared with the utmost care by the translator, the lamented Professor Israel Friedlaender, and is really a synopsis of Jewish history in Russia and Poland.

The Society has just printed Dr. Halper's "Post-Biblical Hebrew Literature," consisting of Hebrew texts, notes and glossary, and in a few weeks we shall distribute to members the volume containing the English translation of the texts. The plan of the work is designed to familiarize students and the general reader with the growth and development of post-biblical Hebrew literature. The extracts are arranged chronologically and are prefaced by brief entries giving the salient facts of the authors and their works. It is thus a history of Hebrew literature by examples. The author of the work, Dr. B. Halper, who is also the Editor of the Society, has succeeded admirably in presenting the gems of post-biblical Hebrew literature, incorporating practically all its branches within the compass of 200 pages. Viewing the work in its entirety, it may be said that the extracts have been carefully selected, cleverly annotated and gracefully rendered into English. The English volume contains the translations, brief introductions and only such notes as are absolutely necessary for the study of the text. This book bids fair to become the standard text-book in colleges and universities in English-speaking countries, while the Hebrew text can be used everywhere Hebrew is studied and read. It will also serve to introduce the reader to the Jewish Classics which the society has projected.

At last we are in a position to announce definitely that Dr. Malter's work on Saadia Gaon, the publication of which has for various reasons been so long delayed, will be out in a month or two. This book, one of considerable proportions, represents the first complete appreciation of the life and works of the greatest Babylonian scholar and head of an academy (during the first half of the tenth century), who is generally recognized as the father and founder of Jewish scientific research, as it developed during the Middle Ages down to our own time. Dr. Malter's book contains also a minute historical account of the amazing amount of intellectual work that has been done by Jews and Christians in editing and translating, describing and elucidating the numerous writings of this phenomenal Jewish scholar. This book forms the first of the scientific series issued under the Loeb foundation.

Among the books to be sent to members during the coming year will be a volume of essays by Professor Schechter, which has been delayed, and hence will be doubly welcomed when it is published.

The Year Book, the repository of Jewish information of timely interest, with a number of special articles of particular merit, will be published in time for distribution before the new year.

Since the publication of Peretz and the "Yiddish Tales," the society has not issued any translations from the Yiddish. This year the membership will be pleased to receive an exceptionally fine narrative of a trip made by the distinguished Yiddish scholar and poet, Yehoash, in the Holy Land. The translation is made by Dr. Isaac Goldberg, who rendered Ibanez's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" into English.

The innovation of issuing pamphlet literature will be continued this year. The sixteen-page booklet on Rosh Ha-Shanah and Yom Kippur has been distributed among the members and among several organizations interested in the distribution of such inspirational writing. Soon there will appear a "Little Studies in Judaism," dealing with the synagogue service, to be followed by one on home ceremonies and another on the Sabbath. These booklets, issued in addition to the regular publications of the society, it is hoped will spread the knowledge of Jewish belief and practice and deepen Jewish conviction.

The society has issued a formal announcement of the prize competition of the Henry and Diana L. Gitterman Memorial Fund. Under the terms of this fund a thousand dollars is offered for an original study in the English language dealing with "Contributions of Jews to Hygiene." The manuscripts must be in the hands of the society on or about September 1, 1922, and the committee looks forward to the awarding of the prize for a study which will be thorough and popular in presentation.

Among other books that we hold in readiness for publication, or which are being prepared for us, are "Travels in Northern Africa," by Nahum Slousch, who travelled extensively in Morocco and the Great Desert of Africa, and describes the manners and customs of the Jewish communities settled there.

The notes to Professor Ginzberg's "Legends of the Jews," which will form Volume V of this monumental work, is now being made ready for the press.

As for the several special series that have been projected, the writers of the books in the Historical Jewish Communities Series have resumed the work interrupted by the war. The volume on the City of London, which was the last assigned, is the first of the series received. The distinguished scholar, Elkan N. Adler, is the author of this work.

M. Julien Weill and Dr. Maurice Liber are at work on a two volume history of France.

In the Biographical Series we may look forward to an early publication of volumes on Hillel, Sir Moses Montefiore, Baron de Hirsch and Judah Touro.

The society has also assigned a series of books about the Bible which will serve as helps to the study of the Holy Scriptures. The volume on the "Bible in the Making" dealing with the Hebrew Canon, telling the story of the Bible as it has come down to us, is from the hand of Professor Max L. Margolis. This book will appear soon.

The Pulpit Bible has been published and several hundred copies have already been purchased by the leading synagogues in America. A number of families have supplied themselves with specially bound copies. No synagogue pulpit, no Sabbath school platform, no lodge rostrum, and no family which treasures the old tradition of recording family events in their family Bible should be without a copy.

The work on the Jewish Classics is proceeding and now that the Hebrew Press will commence printing within a few weeks, some of the texts will be put into type. The publication of the Classics will demonstrate what is not generally known, even to the educated world, that Jewish literature and thought was not closed with the Bible but continued and acted throughout the ages in all the departments to which literature is usually devoted.

The Hebrew Press is, happily, and accomplished fact. The presses are now being installed and work will commence in a few weeks. Machines have been especially constructed; the type was specially designed on the basis of the most beautiful models. The compositor, who carries with him the old traditions of one of the great Hebrew presses of Europe is ready to start composition of our sacred literature and our post-biblical treasures. Without undue optimism, after seeing the first specimens, one will readily assert that this press will revolutionize the art of Hebrew printing. Jewish scholars will henceforth not need to send their manuscript abroad, and Oriental societies and kindred institutions may count upon having the work done by us inexpensively and beautifully.

The need of a Jewish commentary to the Bible has long been felt by English speaking Jews, and to meet this need, the society will issue a series of commentaries to explain the Bible in the light of Jewish thought. These commentaries will combine scholarly research with popular treatment. Assignments for the Pentateuch have already been made.

It is our sincere hope that on the basis of the report which has just been submitted and the inspiration which we are to gather from the remarks which are to be made to-night, the call may be heard throughout America and that the Society may realize before many days have passed the Sustaining Fund of $200,000 to help pay the indebtedness incurred for the work done and to enable it to build more effectively for the future.

DR. SAMUEL SCHULMAN'S ADDRESS

The annual meeting of our Society this year ought to mark a prophetic milestone in its career. We should not be content with the justified pride in the splendid achievements, which have given it an international reputation. We have the right to demand of American Jewry recognition of the importance of the Society's work. Considering what it has done for Jewish culture in this country, it has been extremely modest in its claims. And its modesty has been rewarded not by munificence, but rather by neglect.

The sage in the Scriptures told us long ago that the wisdom of the poor man is despised. Our Society has been wise in the plan and method of its work. It has proven the main unifying force in American Israel. Its domain has been the literature of the Jew of all times and lands. It thus became the spokesman to English readers of the soul of the Jew. In its literary output it hospitably welcomed representatives of every shade of thought and religious conviction in Israel. It did not even refuse to accept valuable manuscripts from non-Jewish hands. Nothing that was of the Jewish spirit or that worthily presented any aspect of Jewish life, anywhere, was alien to its enterprise. It became, as a matter of fact, the only power in the land making for the spiritual and cultural interests of "Catholic Israel." It stood above all parties, because it was guided by the principle that those who love their people and the literature which is the product of their people's genius, do, despite all necessary differences of interpretation of the sacred heritage and partisan controversies on the living problems of the day, agree in the deepest things. Consciously or unconsciously, they are in profound harmony. The Society's record of service is incomparable. It would be no exaggeration to say that in what it has already done it has provided for English-speaking people the necessary wherewithal for a liberal Jewish education. It has presented Jewish history by the hand of its greatest master. It has given the summary of Jewish ethical ideals by the man who, as a modern Philo, combined the widest Western culture with an intimate knowledge of the vast range of Jewish thought. It has revealed the treasures of Rabbinical literature through the works of that unique personality, who knew how to make theology as interesting as fiction. It has given pictures of the life of the struggling masses of Jewry, with all the tragedy of their suffering and with all the indomitable faith, geniality of soul and unconquerable optimism, which kept the Jew alive amidst a world in arms against him. It neglected no Jewish interest. It wrote for the child, and it appealed to the man and woman of culture. And it crowned all its achievements by the production of the English translation of the Scriptures, which will be used by all English-speaking Jews all over the world, and which those in the front rank of Christian scholarship, to speak in the words of George F. Moore, say, gives to "English-reading peoples the best version of the Old Testament in existence." It has laid the foundations deep for the structure, which still has to be builded, so that it becomes the chief center of popular education for the Jews in America. And while its past is secured in its reputation, there are, as you know, far-flung plans for the future. But while we are rich in plans, we are poor in purse. No institution in this country, considering its service, has received such feeble support as was given to our Society. It is time that the intelligence of American Jewry realize what it owes to our Society. It is time that it earnestly resolve to provide us with funds, which are indispensable for the carrying to success of the enterprises we now have in hand. For the Society is the strongest defense of the Jew, and the most fertile influence for the preservation of Judaism in this land.

The year that is past has been one to try the Jewish soul. For the first time in the history of American Jewry is was called upon to meet an organized attack of anti-Semitism, imported from Europe to our own beloved country, in which it had before this struck no root. We met this attack with dignity, with courage, with self-reliance. We met it with a confidence in the American spirit of fair play and justice, which was amply justified by the magnificent expression on the part of the best minds in this country of their indignation against the malicious and insidious propaganda against the Jew. We do not fear the enemy from without. We have assurance of the Prophet, that "no weapon forged against the servant of the Lord shall prosper, and no tongue that rises up to contend with him shall fail of being condemned." The enemy that sought to destroy the Jew only succeeded in strengthening him in his loyalty, in throwing him back upon the resources of his spirit, upon his uncompromising faith in the Everlasting God, and upon his conviction in his mission to serve the world. The Hamans from the time when runners were in fashion to our day of Fords have only proven a challenge to the courage, to the self-sacrifice and to the conscience of the Jew. In the face of the enemy he has vindicated his right to live by the courage, and, as the Midrash tells us, by the culture of the Mordecais, and by the devotion and death-defying loyalty of the Esthers. Persecution has made the Jew strong. How strong he would have become without having his soul harassed by the world's hate, without having his energies dissipated by warding off the blows of the accuser, and by being permitted the untrammelled self-criticism and self-judgment which are indispensable to the life of any people, we do not know. Because thus far our strength has been tested not by prosperity; it has been whetted by adversity. Israel may say: Hardly have I been at peace, hardly have I been at rest, hardly have I been at leisure in any land, when the storm came. Even the freest lands do not seem, for any considerable length of time, to be free from the outbursts of antipathy against the Jew. But the immortal record of the Jew, as Priest-people, as thinker, as martyr, as sage, as hero, as idealist, and sagacious man of affairs, a record which it is our Society's main business to present to the world by means of its books, proves that Israel was unafraid to meet the foe in whatever form, and to survive him.

It is not the enemies from without that need disturb us so much. They, indeed, do the Jews too much honor in singling them out in every crisis of history as the scapegoat for humanity's sins. It is no wonder that all over the world Jew-hatred makes itself loud. For we are living in a world that is sick, as the result of its own excesses, its violences, its race-hatreds, and its idolatrous worship of might instead of right. But sick as it is, it is a world that is still very young. We need not despair. There is hope for its complete cure. Judged by the standards of the Eternal, a few thousand years of history are but hours in humanity's long day on earth. The modern man, despite the thin veneer of his civilization, reproduces all the diseases of human nature. And one of them is the prejudice against the Jew, with which Israel has been familiar all through its career. And the world will not be completely cured until it has whole-heartedly gone to school and learned of Israel's Torah, which is a "tree of life to those who take hold of it." At least, we think that its ways are ways of pleasantness, and all its paths are peace. We fear not the enemy from without. What can injure us beyond help are the enemies of indifference, ignorance, disloyalty, that thrive in our own household. And anti-Semitism will prove no unmixed curse, if, as always in our history, it will act as a goad to the Jewish conscience, as a quickener of Jewish responsibility, and as a reviver of the deep instincts of faithfulness to Israel. We see some signs of this revival.

Revival has been the watchword of American Jewry. We feel that something is wrong with us, as the result of our own negligence, more than of the world's injustice. We feel that what American Jewry needs is an awakening of personal faith, a re-dedication to the ideals for which the Jew has lived in history. Such an awakening and such a re-dedication will be best achieved by that appeal to the common spirit of Israel, by that presentation of the message of the Jewish soul, as it speaks out of our literature, which our Society is called upon to provide.

In this work of revival the Jewish Publication Society is called upon to do the chief share. But in order that it do it efficiently, it must have much more than the pittance which it has thus far received from American Jewry.

The year that has passed has also been of tragic significance to our Society. We mourn the death of that great benefactor, that one man in Jewry who better than any other, understood the needs of Judaism in this land. From the beginning of the Society, all through its history, Jacob H. Schiff stood out as its most distinguished supporter and matchless benefactor. Many-sided as were his princely benefactions in philanthropy and in education, that which was nearest to his heart was the provision for Jewish education, for the preservation of our religion, for the extension of its influence. He felt that it was a small thing to provide for the needs of the body, but that it was a great thing to provide for the life of the Jewish soul. It was he that made possible the launching of the enterprise of the Bible translation. And his munificent gift enabled the Society to lay out its plans for the publication of the Classics of Jewish Post-Biblical Literature. He had a world vision. Though nothing Jewish anywhere was alien to his heart, he was convinced that this country was destined to become a center of world-wide influence, from which would radiate fructifying powers for Jewry in all lands. American Jewry could do nothing better to honor the memory of this man, who has taken his place with the immortal leaders in our history, than by erecting a monument for him, through generous contributions to the fund of $200,000 which our Society is trying to raise. Compared with the vast amounts which have been collected during the last few years, this is a very small sum indeed. To quote from the letter that Mr. Zangwill wrote to the Society on the occasion of its twenty-fifth anniversary, it should be "child's play." It might be child's play to get money for a book from "The Children of the Ghetto," but it will no doubt be labor to raise the money from the great-grandchildren of the ghetto. Let it be a labor of love. And we must have this money. Otherwise we cannot continue our work.

We have always been a people of the Book. Jewish piety was made to depend upon the indispensableness of Jewish culture. An ignorant man could not be a truly reverent or pious man. Such was the teaching of one of the gentlest of our sages. It did not depreciate simple piety, but it had confidence that Jewish piety would not be content to remain illiterate. If the Jew is to be made strong in his consciousness, animated with a worthy pride in his heritage, provided with a justification for his existence as Jew, by knowledge of the sanctities of that heritage, and therefore, by an insight into his duty, if the Jew is to become an effective moral and spiritual force in American life, this can only be accomplished by education. And, indeed, education is the remedy for all the ills, not only of the Jew, but of modern life. A brilliant enemy of the Jew in a recent book says that he wants to walk backwards in history. That is a healthful performance, provided it is carried on without prejudice. And if we walk backwards far enough, we shall come to the roots of the modern man's moral and spiritual life, and we shall find them in our sacred Scriptures. The Bible is Israel's greatest gift to the world. The Bible is more needed to-day than ever. For what shall perpetuate the idea of the common heritage of Western civilization in this age, when racial rivalries are keen and national chauvinisms are being pampered, if not the Bible, which is the universal tongue for the conscience of Christendom? I profoundly believe that what the modern man needs is a view of the world and life as it is presented in the great classic of the Bible, the ancient covenant. He needs to learn three fundamentals correspond to the three divisions of our own Jewish Holy Writ. He must learn, once more, respect for law. He must safeguard modern liberty by reverence for the authority of the law of the land. And he needs also the constant stimulation of the prophetic vision. The law conserves the experience of the past. And until a new interpretation changes it, men of law-abiding habits must obey it. But the living conscience is progressive. It envisages the better future, which will rise out of the soil of the past. Prophetic vision is the inspiration to unlimited progress in social righteousness. And lastly, the modern man needs a wisdom of life which will enable him to enjoy the present. He needs a philosophy which is pragmatic enough to tell him that as you sow, thus you reap. He will get it in our Proverbs. And he needs an encouragement for the freedom of the intellect, which dares to play with all possible doubts and questions which the human spirit can put and still find a safe anchorage in the respect for the eternal realities. Revere the Almighty and observe His commandments. This he will find in our Ecclesiastes. And he needs the sublime faith which will enable him to triumph over suffering and to work his way to the conviction that his Redeemer liveth. And this, too, he will find in the religious idealism of Job. Thus our Scriptures give him a law and a vision and a wisdom.

This Bible, however, cannot be read off-handedly by any one without help. The Bible ought to be sold at as low a price as possible. I still look forward to the time when we will be able to give it away to the masses of our people, as a vigorous Israel in America ought to do. But, above all, the Bible needs comment. We cannot allow others to explain our Bible for us, no more than we could remain content to have them translate it for us. The most important project, therefore, that the Society has in hand is the series of commentaries by Jewish scholars on the books of the Bible. There is a crying need for these commentaries. If our people in this land is to be won again to the reading of the Bible, if it is not to perish in exile for lack of knowledge, it can only be restored to the roots of Jewish culture, which carry the tree of the whole of Jewish life by making the Bible an open book for Jews. It will never get knowledge of its own Bible through the helps offered by non-Jewish scholars. For it can be said that no matter how large the learning and how broad and unprejudiced the mind, a Christian scholar approaches our Bible necessarily with the prepossession that it is only a prelude, an introduction to the main content, which is to be found in what is called the new covenant. But we look upon our Bible as complete in itself. We look upon it as containing a unifying and harmonious view of the world and life. We recognize it as a foundation for the great classic literature which was built upon it. But as a foundation, it is self-sufficient. It contains the essence of the Jewish spirit, the revelation of the Everlasting God, through the creative genius of Israel. These commentaries, therefore, are indispensable as a supplement to the English translation.

We have other projects, like the Hebrew press. It is time that this country should have a printing press which will enable us to produce Hebrew books and the Hebrew characters that sometimes are indispensable even in English books. It is time that we should show our complete maturity as a Jewish community. The world is looking to America for reasons economic, political, international. The Jews of the world are also looking to America. They are not looking merely for material help. Certainly all the Western Jewries, after the European debacle, are looking to America as the land which is destined, during the next one hundred years, to influence Jewish life. Ought we then not to be completely equipped for our great work of education? We ought to have funds enough to coax the best writers. We ought to be able to produce a book which shall present to the world the modern Jew with his idealism, with his deep loyalty, with his life profoundly influenced by his rich, psychical heritage and by the faith, which is still the source of whatever is best in the Jew. We ought to supplement our fiction of the ghetto with some great book on the life of modern Jewry. I think, if we had the funds, we might prove a stimulus to some great writers, even non-Jewish writers, who would meet the spirit of Israel with profound sympathy. And is it too much to expect that many a brilliant Jewish mind, that now feeds the culture of the non-Jewish world, may be attracted and brought back home? We ought to have a first-class monthly literary magazine, which shall bring the values of Jewish culture to every cultivated home in the land. We can do all these things. We must do all these things if we have the funds. The Jewish Publication Society can be said, in the words of Judah ha-Levi to be the heart of Jewry in this land. The heart is strong, hopeful, enthusiastic, stoutly determined to do its best and to realize the plans that dangle before its imaginings. But the heart, as the Talmudic saying suggests, should lead to the open pocket. Let Jews of this land put their hands into their pockets, draw generously from them, gladden the Jewish Publication Society and contribute to the great revival of the faith of the Jew and to the preservation of the spirit of Judaism in this land.
